JAMES RESTON

Secretary of State Dean Rusk has emerged as the principal defender of the Administration's policy on Vietnam.

There is little chance of rain today with winds from the south southeast 8-15 mph. Sunrise today was at 7:30 a.m., sunset at 6:45 p.m. Yesterday's 7 a.m. report: high 46; low 31; there was .03 inches of precipitation recorded. The river level was 4.3 feet and falling.

Pool level 1315.10 feet (desired summer pool level 1328; maximum 1365 feet). Outflow temperature 55 degrees; upper reservoir 58 degrees. Reading at the Warren gauge 4.33 feet.

WARREN COUNTY

Sunday the Warren County Medical Association is conducting a countywide "End Measles" immunization program from 1 to 5 p.m. in five school centers. The vaccine to be administered is effective and safe and should be received for the safety of children. Last year 51 children died in Pennsylvania from the disease.

Again Tidoute will be the site of the Pennsylvania State Fishing Championship Tournament. The big event starts Saturday and runs through Sunday. Other events are also planned by the Warren County community in conjunction with the tourney. See stories inside this issue.

PENNSYLVANIA

Attempts to bring a close to the steel truck drivers strike in a seven-state area, including Pennsylvania, appear near collapse. A spokesman for the National Steel Carriers Association said a proposed settlement "is not worth the paper it's written on. . . . We will meet Friday to make a decision, but I'm sure it will not be accepted."

THE NATION

The federal government, after many hearings and much debate, announced its proposed new safety standards for cars and trucks. Ten of the new standards were proposed for possible imposition on Jan. 1, 1969, and 37 others were scheduled for long-range study.

In a crowded courtroom here, a former member of the Ku Klux Klan described in a quiet voice to a federal jury his role in the lynching of three young civil rights workers in 1964. James Edward Jordan, said he had seen the three youths sprawled on the ground, and seen them loaded onto the back of a station wagon and driven to a dam site where a bulldozer was used to bury them in a common grave.

The Soviet Union passed a law extending military service and training to a greater number of persons, including high school boys. The same law provided for a one-year cut in the regular four-year service requirement.

In the face of widening congressional and public criticism of the Johnson Administration's policies in Vietnam, Secretary of State Dean Rusk held a news conference to warn that if the United States abandoned its pledges to South Vietnam and other nations in Southeast Asia, it would "subject this country to mortal danger." Rusk took a hard line during the 55-minute meeting with reporters and argued American interests were at stake in Vietnam because of the threat Communist China posed to non-Communist nations over the next decade.

In Vietnam, military spokesmen reported that 102 American servicemen had been killed in action last week, the lowest weekly total in two months. The total number of U.S. troops killed in the war rose to 13,736.

A movement was said to be underway to postpone the General Assembly's scheduled debate on the Middle East.

SPORTS

Dave Cobb posted a course record of 11:45 to lead Warren Area High School's cross country team to a 19-36 victory over Tusculum yesterday. Larry Maxwell followed Cobb across the finish line, Jim Grillo was fourth and Dan Pierce took fifth place. Page 7.

The St. Louis Cardinals won the World Series in yesterday's seventh game, 7-2 behind the three-hit pitching of Bob Gibson, who notched his third victory of the 1967 fall classic and his fifth straight in Series competition. Sparked by Gibson and Julian Javier homers and a record-setting performance on the basepaths by Lou Brock, the Cards hung the defeat on a tired Jim Lonborg. Complete Series roundup on Page 6.

The expanded National Basketball Association and its new rival, the 11-team American Basketball Association, open their 1967-68 seasons tonight. Page 7.

Pennsylvania's Waynesburg College pushed San Diego State for the top spot on this week's Associated Press small-college football poll. The Yellow Jackets drew three first place votes and 101 points to trail the Aztecs by only 24. Page 7.

Compromise In Strike Staggers

By BEN DE FOREST
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Striking steel haulers said yesterday they'll go ahead with voting on a plan to end the violent dispute despite eleven-hour roadblocks from trucking firms.

Strike leader William Kusley gave the green light to the voting as spokesmen for two trucking associations indicated they'll reject the peace plan hammered out Tuesday in Pittsburgh by a seven-state mediation team.

But Kusley emphasized the strike will continue "and no one will return to work until acceptance of these proposals by all parties is obtained."

Walter Mantho, a spokesman for the 68-company National Steel Carriers Association, said a proposed settlement "is not worth the paper it's written on. . . . We will meet Friday to make a decision, but I'm sure it will not be accepted."

Robert Eazor, speaking for 80 steel hauling firms in the Pittsburgh area, said the drivers will have to compromise on an agreement drafted by a seven-state mediation panel Tuesday or face the prospect of going out of business.

But the drivers didn't seem in a mood for compromise. "Our men are really upset about it," said a strike leader.

Meanwhile, there was more violence yesterday as the eight-week strike of 10,000 to 20,000 drivers continued to tie up highway shipments from mills.

A dynamite blast damaged the Aetna Freight Line terminal at Middletown, Ohio. A spokesman said the firm had planned putting its idle trucks back on the road, "but I guess these will be held up for a while now." In New Jersey and Pennsylvania, truckers reported being fired on in pre-dawn darkness, but no body was hurt.

The strikers own and drive their own rigs and are paid on a percentage basis. Disenchanted with a Teamsters Union contract, they wanted their share of shipping tariffs hiked from 73 to 79 per cent. But long waits at mills to be loaded and unloaded is their chief gripe and the main stumbling block. The drivers originally said they would wait two hours but wanted $15 an hour after that.

The mediation panel recommended a five per cent tariff boost for the drivers and a $10-an-hour payment for waiting more than two hours.

Strike leaders said they were pleased with this and would recommend that the drivers vote approval. But Pittsburgh trucking firms, after a Wednesday meeting, proposed four hours of free waiting time in mills.

"It's four hours or nothing," said Eazor, the Pittsburgh trucking spokesman, "if the drivers insist on two hours, it will be all over. The steel

Jaycees Plan Student Career Night

Warren County high school students will have a chance to explore and discuss the career opportunities available to them upon graduation when the Warren County Jaycees sponsor "Career Night" at Warren Area High School.

The program starts Monday at 7:30 p.m. and is open to all county high school students and their parents. Qualified persons from 40 different career fields will be on hand to discuss the merits of each occupation. Members of the armed services will also be on hand to discuss career possibilities with those students who qualify.

The keynote speaker for the program titled "Youth Looks to the Future" will be Dr. Thomas K. Barrett who will address a mass meeting of students in the High School auditorium. Two sessions approximately 40 minutes in length will follow the mass meeting which is expected to last about 30 minutes.

These sessions will be held in individual class rooms and will be devoted to the individual careers represented, which include careers in tool and die making, machinist, tool design, technology discussed by Bill Hoff and Frank Sterley; carpenter and cabinet maker, Ernie McGraw; auto and diesel mechanic and auto body repairs, Bob Kussey; welder, William Pasquarette; heavy construction equipment operator, Jack Dodd; fish and game warden, Dave Tidus; hairdressing and cosmetology, Mrs. Helen Crawford; police work, Sgt. Roger Thelin.

DISCUSS SHOPLIFTING

An educational seminar designed to promote retail growth by controlling shrinkage (shoplifting) was held last night at the Blue Manor. The seminar was open to all owners, store managers and officers of retail business in or near Warren for their in-store improvement in preventing losses due to illegal means either by employees or customers. Guests at last night's seminar included John F. Glover,

Forester Outlines the Value Of Timber, Wildlife Control

Stating that both timber and wildlife were important in the management program of the Allegheny National Forest, Paul Sundheimer established a basis for the talk he delivered to press and radio representatives at the administration building at Klondike yesterday afternoon.

Sundheimer, who has long directed the forest-wildlife management activities on federal lands, and is credited with developing some outstanding concepts in the field, broke down his partly-illustrated presentation into three parts: forestry management, wildlife management, and management practices that tend to increase production of both trees and game when properly related.

Forestry production goals on the local forest, he said, are directed toward establishing the Allegheny National Forest as the leading producer of hardwoods among the nation's 165 national forests. This goal can and will be realized, he said, because one of our local species, black cherry, the second most valuable hardwood, can be grown in great quantities in our section of the country. The most valuable, walnut, can only be grown in limited quantities, even in the most suited localities.

Practices now being used to regenerate cherry growth, a necessary step to insure a continued harvest of the species lean to the clear-cutting of standing forest tracks as the most practical means of getting regeneration. And it is while this regenerative growth is building up through a brush stage that it is most beneficial to wildlife, providing ideal habitat for as much as 15 years in the clear-cut areas.

Currently some 2500 areas on the Allegheny are being clear-cut annually. This will be increased to about 4000 acres a year in the not too distant future, Sundheimer said, thereby contributing tremendously to the habitat available for the production of wildlife.

In addition to clear-cutting, a percentage of growth on the Allegheny is maintained in the coniferous species, such as hemlock and pine, to provide cover for wildlife. And while a certain amount of hardwood growth is lost because these species are maintained, such loss is justified when the benefit to wildlife is considered.

Through the current management program (a program that Sundheimer himself planned and instituted) it can be expected both timber and game production on the Allegheny National Forest will increase considerably as more and more of the federal lands are converted to the "uneven age" type of management. And it can be expected that game populations will increase as well when greater areas of suitable habitat are available to them.

Following his talk, Sundheimer answered a number of questions concerning the management plan and the benefits

Sundheimer Takes Post In Columbia

Paul Sundheimer, a long time staff member of the Allegheny National Forest, will leave his position sometime soon to become a forestry advisor for the U.S. Corps of Engineers in Bogota, Columbia.

In making the announcement, Sundheimer said that his new job is a part of an international aid program that could possibly take him to other South American countries, although his base will be in Bogota.

The transfer, he said, appeals to him because it will offer the opportunity of having a second career.

While on the staff of the Allegheny National Forest, Sundheimer has been director of forestry and wildlife management and was personally responsible for a revised management policy that has attracted widespread attention because of the manner in which it not only improves forest production, but is highly beneficial to wildlife.

No replacement for him has yet been decided upon by the Forest Service.

Rusk Defends LBJ's Policy In Vietnam War

BY HEDRICK SMITH
(c) N.Y. Times News Service
WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Dean Rusk, replying forcefully to congressional critics, of Administration policy, yesterday warned that if the United States abandoned its treaty pledges to South Vietnam and Southeast Asia, it would "subject this country to mortal danger."

Rusk, in a departure from his usual calm tone, spoke with obvious emotion during his 55-minute news conference yesterday. He contended that American national interest was at stake in Vietnam because Communist China poses a threat to non-Communist Asian nations over the next decade.

"If any who would be our adversary should suppose that our treaties are a bluff, or will be abandoned if the going gets tough," Rusk asserted in his opening statement, "the result could be catastrophe for all mankind."

Rusk was the third prominent leader to vigorously defend President Johnson's policy this week in what is seen as an Administration counterattack on critics of its war policy. On Monday, John M. Bailey, the Democratic party chairman, accused Republicans of playing "an opportunist game," on Vietnam, and Wednesday the House speaker, John W. McCormack of Massachusetts, charged critics with giving comfort to North Vietnam.

Rusk gave no hint of compromise on the Administration's terms for peace or negotiations. He ticked off recent congressional proposals for peace initiatives — a pause in bombing North Vietnam, de-escalation of the bombing, action by the United Nations, or a new international conference at Geneva on Vietnam — and brushed them all aside as unworkable because of North Vietnam's opposition. He contended that North Vietnam was not interested in ending the war.

To limit the bombing to the region just north of the embattled demilitarized zone between North and South Vietnam, an idea endorsed recently by several senators, would "not move us one inch toward peace," Rusk declared. Such a bombing limitation, he said, "would be categorically rejected by Hanoi." As for a unilateral cessation of American bombing was raised, Rusk replied that without the pressure of the bombing on North Vietnam "where would be the incentive for peace?"

U.S. Planes Attack Haiphong Shipyard

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. warplanes made their first attacks of the Vietnam war on shipyard facilities in Haiphong yesterday.

Navy pilots reported direct hits on drydocks and buildings of a North Vietnamese shipyard 1.6 miles northwest of Haiphong's center and heavy damage to a second boatyard 1.2 miles west of the city's center.

The targets previously were on the Pentagon's restricted list.

The raids, by waves of fighter-bombers from carriers in the Gulf of Tonkin, were aimed at two shipyard facilities used mainly for repair. Haiphong's main docks to the north and northwest of the city were not hit.

By EDWIN Q. WHITE
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — A broadcast dispatch from Hanoi reported American planes raided Haiphong yesterday, hitting "a number of populated areas inside the city and in its suburbs." The official Vietnam News Agency said ground fire felled two planes.

There was no comment from Saigon officials.

Recent raids have cut the four big bridges within Haiphong and blasted fuel dumps, a military compound and a MIG base on the outskirts in the campaign to restrict the dispersal of war supplies shipped into that port and cripple its defenses.

Heavy weather cut down air strikes against the North Wednesday to 97 missions. The number will decline further as a switch in seasonal winds, already under way, brings on the rain and fog that will blanket North Vietnam for much of the time until next spring.

U.S. B-52 Stratofortresses, soaring high above storms that kept some lighter planes grounded, hammered again yesterday at Communist gun positions that are sporadically shelling U.S. Marine posts below the demilitarized zone.

The eight-engine jets, equipped to pinpoint targets through clouds, strewn bombs on known or suspected enemy positions ranging from 2 1/2 to 9 miles northwest of Con Thien, the Leatherneck stronghold that held out against an artillery siege throughout September.

The U.S. Command said ground action was light and scattered.

Communist guns and mortars, though operating at far 0 low their September rate of fire, lobbed 54 shells at outposts below the DMZ Wednesday, wounding four Marines.

A general slackening of the war in the DMZ area and other American-guarded sectors was reflected by a decline in U.S. casualties last week to their lowest point in two months.

The U.S. Command said 102 Americans were killed in action, 890 were wounded and 26 were missing or captured, compared with 150 killed, 1,758 wounded and three missing in the week of Sept. 24-30.

Allied combat dead, however, totaled 375, against 207 in the

St. Louis Cardinals Win a 'Great' Series

By LEONARD J. KOPPETT

(c) N.Y. Times News Service
BOSTON — On the strength of record performances by Bob Gibson and Lou Brock, the St. Louis Cardinals emerged yesterday as champions of the baseball cosmos by winning the seventh and deciding game of the 64th World Series, 7-2.

Gibson's pitching and Brock's hitting and base running proved to be too much for the exuberant Red Sox, who carried their unheralded dreams down to the last day of a dramatic season. The Cardinals, who had won the National League pennant by a wide margin, were heavily favored to win the Series, and seemed to have it wrapped up when they took a 3-1 lead in games last Sunday.

But the Red Sox, who had to come from behind on the last two days of the regular season to win the American League title, won the next two games and set up a final confrontation between Gibson and Jim Lonborg, their own pitching ace. It turned out to be no contest, however, and not much fun for another capacity crowd

5 Fire Towers

In Area Manned

District Forester Robert K. Ache announced today that the five fire towers in District 14 are now being manned. Employees of the Pennsylvania Department of Forests & Waters will be in Tionesta, Plumer, Wheeler, Marienville, and Coal Hill towers from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day that forest conditions are dry enough to allow a fire to start. Persons who observe uncontrolled fires should notify the nearest fire tower or the District Office of the Department of Forests & Waters in Warren.

Local residents and visitors to Northwestern Pennsylvania are cautioned to use extreme care in the use of outside fires during this Fall period.

Smokey the Bear has a few simple rules for preventing fires caused by burning trash or brush. They are: Never burn on a windy or dry day; don't burn between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m.; keep hand tools and water handy when burning; consult your local forest fire officials when in doubt about burning.

Records of the Department of Forests & Waters indicate a large percentage of fires caused by trash burning occur within a day or two after a light rain. Apparently, most people are aware of the fire danger during extremely dry periods, but relax their guard when a light rain occurs.

You local Forest Fire Warden and Smokey the Bear ask you to PLEASE BE CAREFUL WITH FIRE.

LEWISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Roy Wilson McCloskey of Preston, N.J., identified as a Bucknell University student, was jailed Thursday after he was charged with possession of marijuana.

Justice of the Peace Dale Reichart of West Milton ordered McCloskey held in the Union County jail on a charge of violating the state narcotics law. Bail was set at $20,000.

Union Rejects Ford Offer

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers Union has rejected a new contract offer by the strikebound Ford Motor Co. and efforts to end a 35-day strike are deadlocked. The Associated Press learned last night.

"The offer was generous," a well placed source said, "The talks aren't going anywhere right now."

No details of the offer—or why it was turned down—could be learned immediately through the all-but-ironclad news blackout that has been clamped on the negotiations since Tuesday.

The source, mindful of the blackout which in past years has often signaled a break in stalled talks, declined to elaborate.

The report temporarily cooled hopes a settlement was imminent.

Such hopes, first raised when both sides imposed the blackout, were buoyed briefly earlier yesterday when a beaming Walter P. Reuther, UAW president, made his first public appearance since Monday, visiting the Ford headquarters at suburban Dearborn.

It was Reuther's smiling demeanor as much as the fact that he was appearing in public for the first time since a news blackout was clamped on the talks, Tuesday that boosted hopes a settlement could come soon, possibly tonight.

But following his departure, usually well informed sources said such hopes appeared to be too optimistic.

Ford's chief bargainer, Malcolm L. Denise, was at the company headquarters when Reuther arrived, but did not appear. "Position of a news blackout, in which both sides refuse public comment of any kind, usually signals significant movement in bargaining."

Whether Denise and Reuther were meeting elsewhere was an unanswered question.

Negotiations between Ford and the United Auto workers began July 11. The company made its first offer Aug. 28. That was rejected as totally inadequate three days later.

Ford, General Motors and Chrysler made virtually identical offers at the same time. Ford was picked as the union target for winning a pattern-setting package to be taken later to GM and Chrysler for matching or bettering.

As in the past negotiations, the union struck only the target company leaving its competitors pouring out new models for a normally lush fall market.

The union is asking a guaranteed annual income, a substantial wage boost for all with something on top of it for skilled tradesmen, and higher pensions, among other things.

The company has offered an immediate 13-cent hourly increase, with something additional to be negotiated for skilled tradesmen and 2.8 per cent wage increases in the second and third years of a three-year contract.

companies will use common carriers companies paying drivers by the hour or the railroads or buy their own trucks.

"The only advantage the independents have," he said, "is they were willing to wait to be loaded. If they lose that advantage, there's no reason for the steel companies to do business with them."

"One time I sat 12 hours," complained one trucker, "and said something about it. You know what they told me? They say if you don't like it, go."

An Interstate Commerce Commission report in 1965 said no payment was necessary for vehicles of 18 tons until they wait for more than six hours.

WITH GO-GO DANCERS

Chief Locks Self in Office

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — The police chief of this northeastern Pennsylvania community was charged with obstructing justice after locking himself in his office for four hours with two go-go dancers.

He said later he did it to keep the girls, who returned here from Pittsburgh to press various charges against three other persons from being "harassed."

Chief Joseph Delaney and the girls, once billed as "exotic dancers" at a local tavern remained locked in the chief's office as a constable stood outside waiting to serve the girls with warrants, charging disorderly conduct, malicious mischief, abusive language, assault and battery and attempted assault and battery.

The girls are Cora Andrews, 20 and Beverly Stewart, both of Baltimore. They returned Wednesday from Pittsburgh where they said they now are performing, to press assault and battery charges they had filed against Jeannette DeFalco, owner of a lounge, Peter Hainis, a bartender, and Joseph Aliciene, a patron.

The girls charged they were held and beaten by the three during an altercation at the lounge Oct. 4.

At Wednesday's hearing, the three defendants filed counter-charges against the girls. Constable William Howley went to Delaney's office to serve the warrants and found the door locked. Aliciene later filed the obstructing justice charge against the chief.

Two newsmen said they went around the back of the building to find a patrolman putting a ladder against the side of the building under the chief's window, presumably to get the three out. It was too short.

Miss DeFalco, Hainis, Aliciene and the two dancers were held in $500 bail each for grand jury action. No hearing date was set for Delaney.

Military Training to Start At Age 16 in Soviet Union

By JOHN WEYLAND

Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Parliament Supreme Soviet) unanimously passed yesterday a new draft law starting military training at 16 after Defense Minister Andrei A. Grechko charged the United States is "stepping up military preparations" against this country.

The new law also reduces the regular draft age from 19 to 18 and cuts the length of service for ordinary draftees from 3 to 2 years.

Marshal Grechko said the shorter length of service made it necessary to give boys still in school two years of part-time military training. The Soviet Union had not previously involved schoolboys in its defense program since World War II. Parliament passed the draft law at the end of a three-day session during which it also approved a 15 per cent increase in the published defense budget. That will be $18.56 billion in 1968.

The marshal described to parliament a world in which the United States and other "imperialist powers" are threatening communism and risking the outbreak of another world war.

He accused the United States of using a "screen of talk on peace and cooperation" while in fact "creating dangerous hotbeds in various parts of the world."

The defense minister maintained that "Washington is increasingly escalating the war in Vietnam and backing Israel, which he blamed for the Middle East war and its troubled aftermath."

Grechko warned that this had "aggravated the international situation" and is "increasing the danger of a new world war."

The defense minister assured parliament that the Soviet armed forces are ready for any contingency. He said they have "Everything needed to discharge their duty in defense of the homeland."

Grechko boasted of increases in the mechanization and firepower of regular troops. He stressed that strategic rocket units and antiaircraft defense units have "colossal" and "incomparable" power.

Thus appeared to be a warning to the United States that its cities could be blasted in case of another world war, while targets in this country would be protected.

The marshal noted that true Communists "have never been pacifists, they have always supported just wars."

The new draft law is the first general overhaul of the Soviet military service system since 1939.

A shortening of the period of service had been predicted because of the baby boom that started after World War II. This is providing extensive manpower now for the Soviet armed forces to draw on.

The reintroduction of school-boy training came as a surprise. Grechko's speech indicated the Kremlin considers the international situation too tense to introduce the shorter period of service without offsetting that somehow.

Another sign of this thinking appeared to be the decision to keep officers on active duty longer so as not to waste valuable military experience.

Series

of 35,188 in Fenway Park. Lonnberg was trying to pitch with only two days rest, and simply didn't have his good stuff. Gibson, with three days rest, was the stronger from the start, and by the middle of the game all doubt about the final result was gone.

Gibson pitched a three-hitter, striking out 10, for his third complete game and victory of the series, and thereby added several lines to the record books. He also hit a home run, and won the sports car awarded by Sports Magazine to the outstanding player.

But Brock was no less important, he stole three more bases, for a total of seven, breaking a record that had stood for 58 years; and his two hits gave him a batting average of .414 for the series, the best on either team.

Gibson and Brock were the key men in the fifth inning, which was the crux of the game. The Cardinals had taken a 2-0 lead in the third but Lonnberg was hanging on. Then Gibson hit his home run, to dead center, with one out, and Brock looped a single to left. He stole second and third, and scored on a fly to right by Roger Maris.

With a 4-0 lead, Gibson was relatively secure, even though George Scott had opened the Boston fifth with his team's first hit, a triple off the center field wall. He scored when the relay to third went wild, but 4.1 was the closest Boston got. Julian Javier's three-run homer off Lonnberg in the sixth put the game out of reach.

What the final game lacked in on-field suspense, however, it made up in the sense of historical continuity which forms such a large part of the appeal of a World Series. Gibson and Brock put their names into position with some of baseball's legendary figures, and provided material for their successors to shoot at.

Gibson's achievements were: 1. By pitching five complete game victories in succession—he won his last two starts against the New York Yankees in the 1964 series—he matched a feat accomplished only by Red Ruffing of the Yankees, over four series in 1937, 1938, 1939 and 1941.

2. By allowing only 14 hits in three games, Gibson matched Christy Mathewson's figure for the fewest hits allowed in three complete series games. Mathewson did it in 1905 with three straight shutouts for the New York Giants against the Philadelphia Athletics. Gibson gave up six hits in the 2-1 game here Oct. 4, five in his 6-0 victory at St. Louis on Sunday; and three yesterday.

3. By starting, finishing and winning three games in one series, Gibson joined select company. Only Mathewson, Babe Adams of Pittsburgh in 1909, Jack Coombs of the Athletics in 1910, Stanley Coveleski of Cleveland in 1920, and Lew Burdette of Milwaukee in 1957 had done it before.

The record Brock broke involved the most hallowed name of all: Honus Wagner, one of the original members of baseball's Hall of Fame. In 1907, Jim Slagle of the Chicago Cubs stole six bases in the five-game series against Detroit. In 1909, Wagner, playing for Pittsburgh, stole the six in the seven-game series against the same Tigers—and against the same catcher, Charles Schmidt.

No one matched that total until yesterday. Brock stole two in the first game, one in the fourth and one in the sixth, but did not reach base in the first two games Lonnberg pitched.

Yesterday Lonnberg got him out twice before Brock's fifth-inning hit. Then Brock stole the two bases that tied the record. He broke it in the ninth as soon as Dave Morehead walked him.

With 12 hits, Brock wound up one short of the World Series record set by Bobby Richardson of the Yankees in 1964, and his total of eight runs scored in one series has been exceeded only twice—once by Lou Gehrig and once by Babe Ruth.

Lonnberg obviously lacked the sharpness that characterized his first two games and most of his 22 victories during the regular season. He had tried once before to pitch with two days' rest, against Cleveland, and had been ineffective. It was the same story yesterday.

The only question was whether Gibson would finish without help. He had struck out eight men in the first five innings, and had recorded an important out in the first inning when he made Carl Yastrzemski pop up after an opening walk and a sacrifice.

When Yastrzemski opened the ninth with a single (which gave him a .400 average for the series), Manager Red Schoendienst went out to the mound for a talk. It may have helped. Gibson made Ken Harrelson rap into a double play and fanned George Scott to end the baseball season.

The Cardinals thus preserved their record of never losing the seventh game of a World Series. They have won six—in 1926, 1931, 1934, 1946, 1964 and 1967. They have also won shorter sets in 1942 and 1944, and lost them in 1928, 1930 and 1943, so that their 8-3 record in championship play represents the greatest success of any National League team.

The Red Sox have not tasted World Series victory since 1918, when they still had Babe Ruth—as a pitcher.

War

previous week and the enemy death toll also was reported up. The U.S. Command said 1,331 of the Viet Cong and their North Vietnamese allies were killed, against a readjusted figure of 1,100 for the week before.

South Vietnamese military spokesmen reported 254 of their men were killed, more than double the 114 of the previous week. The other allies listed 19 dead, down 14.

Unofficial tabulations show 13,745 Americans have been killed, 87,525 wounded and 782 missing or captured in the war since 1961.

President-elect Nguyen Van Thieu announced through a spokesman that he intends, after he is inaugurated Oct. 30, to propose a face-to-face meeting with President Ho Chi Minh of North Vietnam to talk peace. The spokesman said there would be a one-week pause in the bombing of the North if Hanoi agreed to talks on any level or showed a peaceful intent otherwise, such as by halting infiltration of the South.

Chances for Hanoi's acceptance looked remote. Ho Chi Minh's government has turned down repeated overtures from the United States and professes to regard Thieu as an American puppet.

Move on to Postpone U.N. Debate on Mideast

By DREW MIDDLETON

(c) N.Y. Times News Service
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — A movement to postpone the General Assembly's scheduled debate on the Middle East developed rapidly yesterday as hopes rose for decisive action by the Security Council.

The Rumanian foreign minister, Corneliu Manescu, president of the General Assembly, conferred with interested delegations on a postponement of the start of the debate from Monday until Friday, Oct. 20. It was considered unlikely that he would announce his decision until after he had heard the views of the Arab countries. Their inclination now is toward postponement of the topic, which has been placed first on the agenda as a matter of urgency. The general debate—statements on world problems by delegates—ends today.

The Asian bloc, after a meeting this afternoon, agreed to a three-day or four-day postponement. This bloc includes Arab countries on the Asian mainland including Iraq, Syria and Jordan, but it does not include Algeria and the United Arab Republic.

The central point of consultation is what would be considered "decisive" action by the Security Council. Delegates indicated that three lines of thinking were emerging from the consultations of the last three days.

The United States suggests that either of two draft resolutions be submitted to the council, which under the Charter has "primary" responsibility for the maintenance of peace, the first resolution would deal specifically with the main issues, including an appeal for the withdrawal of Israeli forces from the U.A.R., Syria and Jordan, the recognition of Israel's sovereignty and the opening of the Suez Canal. American sources conceded it would be very difficult to win the council's approval for this sort of resolution.

The second draft contemplated by the U.S. would lay down in its preamble the principles that should govern a Middle East settlement. Its single operative paragraph would call for the appointment of a special representative of Secretary General U. Thant.

This representative would be empowered by the council to go to the Middle East to consult all the parties on the dimensions of peace arrangements and, if possible, promote negotiations.

The final position of the Arab states will depend on the outcome of further talks, perhaps this weekend, between Arthur J. Goldberg and the Soviet delegation. But Arab diplomats said their governments opposed any American resolution that would be specific on what they should do in return for Israeli withdrawal and be vague on other points.

'Cuban' Guerrillas Cornered in Bolivia

By PAUL L. MONTGOMERY

(c) N.Y. Times News Service
LA PAZ, Bolivia — The exhausted remnants of the Cuban-inspired Bolivia guerrilla movement is cornered in a valley near where Ernesto Che Guevara's career was ended earlier this week.

Military sources here said yesterday that the battered guerrillas, who had gone from victory to victory until the army gained the upper hand two months ago, were near the end of their rope. It is believed that they have little food or ammunition and that most of them are wounded or sick.

In Vallegrande, the headquarters of the army's Eighth Division 350 miles southeast of here, Col. Joaquin Zenteno, the commander of the northern sector of the army's antiguerrilla campaign said an offer of surrender had been made to the guerrilla band. Zenteno said that if the remaining insurgents do not surrender, "they will be eliminated."

The number of guerrillas remaining is estimated at between a dozen and 30. They are mostly Bolivians, and include several farmers and miners, a university student, a hydraulic engineer and a radio technician. Guevara's two Cuban bodyguards, are believed to still be with the band.

The only known leader remaining is Guido Paredo Leigue, a Bolivian Communist who was one of the organizers of the movement. All the other leaders, including the cadre of Cuban guerrilla specialists from the Sierra Maestra who came with Guevara, have been killed.

The embattled guerrilla band is trapped in three communicating valleys in broken country 10 miles northeast of the jungle hamlet of La Higuera. The army said all entrances to the rugged valleys have been sealed, as well as the roads in the surrounding area.

Minister Says Rights Worker Was Marked to Be Murdered

By BILL NEIKIRK
Associated Press Writer
MERIDIAN, Miss. (AP) — A Ku Klux Klan "titan" told a federal court jury yesterday that the Klan set out to "eliminate" civil rights worker Michael Schwerner by murder.

The Rev. Delmar Dennis, 27, of Meridian, was the second witness to take the stand in the crowded courtroom to testify that Schwerner had been a marked man for several days before he was killed.

Schwerner, 24, a Brooklyn social worker before coming to Meridian, was killed June 21, 1964. Two men who accompanied him on his last trip—Andrew Goodman, 20, of New York, and James Chaney, 22, of Meridian—also were slain.

The 18 men on trial are charged with conspiracy to violate the civil rights of the three who were slain. That's the stiffest federal charge applicable in the case. No state charge was filed.

Maximum punishment possible under the old Reconstruction era law is 10 years and $5,000 fine.

The Rev. Mr. Dennis, who said he preached in both Baptist and Methodist churches in this area, came under sharp cross-examination after his testimony, most of which corroborated earlier testimony by Meridian Police Sgt. C. W. Miller, 43, an ex-Klansman.

Both Miller and the minister said they were members of the White Knights of the Ku Klux Klan Meridian unit, and were told that a top-level decision to eliminate "Goatee," as Schwerner was known, had been made—but that another unit would handle the job.

Unlike Miller, who said he had been banished from the Klan, the Rev. Mr. Dennis testified he remained a member of the terrorist organization.

The minister said he became chaplain of the Meridian Klavern, then was promoted to province titan—an administrative officer and assistant to the imperial wizard, in charge of six counties.

The counties included Neshoba, the Rev. Mr. Dennis said, and on June 16 he attended a meeting in that area at which six of the 18 defendants were present. He identified them as Bernard Akin, Alton Wayne Roberts, Frank J. Herndon, Billy Wayne Posey, Edgar Ray Killen, and E. G. "Hop" Barnett, the sheriff-elect of Neshoba County.

Asked if the present sheriff, Lawrence Rainey, was a Klan member, the Rev. Dennis replied: "I know him to be a member." He added that he had discussed Klan business with Sheriff Rainey, who also is a defendant.

The Rev. Mr. Dennis testified he joined the Klan in March 1964. Afterward, he said, he began making reports to the FBI and had been paid about $5,000 a year for the past three years.

The dozen defense lawyers made frequent objections during the minister's testimony. U.S. Dist. Court Judge Harold Cox overruled them. He also rejected numerous mistrial motions.

During cross-examination, defense lawyer Laurel Weir drew a sharp rebuke and warning from the judge for asking the minister:

"Instead of 30 pieces of silver you got $15,000, did you not?"

The minister said he did not feel bound by his oath to the Klan and agreed he had planned to write "an expose of the Klan."

The Nile is the longest river in the world.

'Avenger' Stabs His Cellman Five Times

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A prisoner charged with stabbing a pretty 20-year-old girl to death was stabbed five times yesterday by a fellow prisoner who apparently considered himself an avenger, according to prison officials.

Prisons Superintendent Edward J. Hendrick, identified the knife-wielder as William J. Barnes, 31, and said, "It seems that Barnes considers himself the girl's avenger."

Hendrick said Barnes apparently had been brooding over the girl's death since reading of it in a newspaper and had cut out a picture of the victim, Sara Bryson of West Philadelphia, and pasted it on his cell wall in Holmesburg prison.

The victim of yesterday's attack, George B. Goins, 27, who is charged with murder in Friday night's slaying, was not seriously injured. He was treated in the prison clinic, Hendrick said.

Goins was stabbed in a maximum security, psychiatric section of the prison.

Goins was in a cellblock corridor when his attacker lunged at him suddenly and stabbed him in the neck, back, chest and arm, police said.

The weapon was a seven-inch long metal slat from a jail bed which had been filed to a point, apparently by scraping it on the rough cell floor, they explained.

Goins, father of three, was arrested by police after surrendering to his minister Saturday. Barnes is awaiting trial on charges of shooting a policeman during a burglary attempt last November.

Miss Bryson was slain a few hours before she was to have been a bridesmaid at her best friend's wedding.

She was buried Wednesday in her bridesmaid dress.

Dies in Crash

GREENSBURG, Pa. (AP)—State police said a car smashed into the trailer on a big rig yesterday, passed underneath and hit an oncoming car, killing a man.

Police said the truck pulled onto U.S. 30 about six miles west of Greensburg into the path of Kenneth Dale Stevens, 25, of Rillton.

The truck driver wasn't hurt.

Airliner Plunges Into Sea; All 66 Aboard Dead

By PHILIP DOPOULOS
Associated Press Writer

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Cruising at 29,000 feet in clear weather, a British-Cypriot Comet jetliner plunged suddenly into the Mediterranean off the Turkish coast yesterday, carrying 66 persons to their deaths. After rescue craft at the scene had pulled up bodies and wreckage, the British European Airways announced there were no survivors among the 59 passengers and crew of seven. The airline said four passengers were Americans.

They were not identified. Capt. William Baillie, company general manager who flew from London to Nicosia to lead an investigation into the crash said: "It is the most terrifying type of accident of this day and age, because it happened from a cruising altitude of 29,000 feet."

"There was a routine message only a few minutes before the accident but there was nothing in the message to indicate that anything was wrong," Police on Kastellorizon, a

Dodecanese island off the Turkish port of Kas, said they watched the airliner plummet into the sea about 35 miles southeast of the island. Rescue craft were dispatched.

The Comet was operated by British European Airways for Cyprus Airways and was on a flight from London to Nicosia.

Airline spokesman in London said those passengers who boarded the plane there were businessmen or vacationers, including some children. Another 27 boarded the plane at Athens.

A spokesman in Athens said 22 of the 27 were Greek, three were Britons and one of the other two possibly was an American. The crew was made up of three Britons and four Cypriots.

The airliner stopped in Athens to refuel and the British air stewardesses were replaced by Greek Cypriots.

The only indication that the passengers had any warning of trouble came from Turkish air patrols. Turkish pilots reported seeing some bodies in the water with lifejackets.

It was the second crash of a passenger plane bound for Cyprus in five months. A chartered Swiss turboprop airliner crashed in April as it was landing on Cyprus, killing 126 persons.

OEOP Program Gets $75,536

A grant of $75,536 for anti-poverty programs in Warren and Forest counties was approved yesterday by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Sen. Joseph Clark said the grant covers three months' continuation of the home help service program and 12 months' "program administration" for the two counties.

The home help program "will train 20 low-income residents for homemakers services," Clark said.

A Job Well Done

It's not often that state officials in Harrisburg will sit up and take notice. But they did sit up and take notice Wednesday when the Kinzua Dam Vacation Bureau, supported by a group of county residents, entertained 35 "blue ribbon" department heads at a luncheon in the Penn Harris Hotel.

While the theme of the meeting "Getting to Know You" was directed to becoming acquainted with the heads of the various state departments, it was the presentation of the many and varied outdoor recreational opportunities either existing or being developed in Kinzua Country that attracted the interest of the officials.

A colored slide program presented by LeRoy Schneck did the trick. It was the well assembled selection of hunting, fishing and camping scenes supplemented by views from Jake's Rocks and Rimrock that fully convinced the officials that Warren County has more to offer the recreationist than is general in other parts of the state.

The extent of their conviction was expressed by the Honorable Clifford L. Jones, secretary, Department of Commerce, who spoke immediately following Schneck's illustrated talk. The secretary complimented the Vacation Bureau for having prepared such an informative program, but stated his department was already "sold" on the future of Warren County in the recreation field. It was after the meeting was adjourned, however, when most of the officials expressed their pleasure with the program and stated their personal conviction that Kinzua Country has what it takes to satisfy almost any outdoorist or vacationer, most of them crediting the slide program with influencing their favorable opinions.

Among those specifically stating they had been presented a new look at Kinzua Country potentials were: Roy W. Trexler, chief, Division of Information and Education, Game Commission; Daniel S. Buser, Jr., Public Relations, Department of Commerce; John E. Morgan, Bureau of Travel Development; Bob Bielo, director, Fish Commission; Glenn Bowers director, Game Commission; Irving Hand, director, State Planning Board; and Honorable George (Heep) Alexander, chairman, Game and Fisheries Committee, House of Representatives.

So it can be said with certainty that the Harrisburg officials did sit up and take notice. And it can also be said with certainty that the reason they did was the well planned arrangements made for their entertainment by the Kinzua Dam Vacation Bureau and the punch provided by an outstanding illustrated sales pitch.

In all, it was a job well done—real well done!

LARRY STOTZ

An Adirondack National Park

If the recent proposal presented by Laurence S. Rockefeller, Chairman of the New York State Council of Parks, that the heartland of the Adirondacks Mountains be made into a National Park should become a reality, New York State would have the largest National Park in the United States.

Yellowstone, the oldest National Park in America, contains 1,939,397 acres, and Mt. McKinley National Park in Alaska embraces 2,231,772 acres. But the proposed Adirondack National Park might contain 2,320,000 acres.

This great acreage—more than four-and-a-half times the area of the Allegheny National Forest—would result if 600,000 acres of privately-owned forest land, located inside the boundaries of the state Forest Preserve were acquired. And the proposal is that it be acquired, by condemnation if necessary, and added to the 1,720,000 acres of state Forest Preserve which would form the bulk of the proposed National Park acreage.

I first worked in the Adirondacks in 1927 as a timber cruiser for a pulpwood company that practiced some of the most intensive forest management in America at that time.

On Bank Service Charges

Q: Do you know how much you are now paying in bank service charges to maintain your checking and savings accounts?

A: Probably you don't. But for the typical customer at a large New York City bank, these charges run about $15 a year, and the charges can run to double or triple this amount.

I cannot give you up-to-date national figures. No national survey of bank service charges has been made since 1957 and none is likely to be made, because, says an American Bankers Association spokesman, bankers fear the Justice Department will view such surveys as "attempts at price fixing and collusion."

But a check of typical New York City charges is indicative. And in view of the fact that you're using an unprecedented variety of bank services today and the long-term trend of these charges is relentlessly up, here are guides on what you're paying and how to reduce your charges.

The service charges at one New York City bank on a regular checking account with a minimum balance of $300, are 6 cents per check, 3 cents per deposit and 1/5 cents a month for maintaining each account. Omitting details on various credits against these charges, the net typical monthly charge is $1 to $1.30.

The typical charge on a special checking account, with no minimum balance, is 50 cents a month plus 10 cents per check. Some banks charge less per check, but add a charge for each deposit.

Usually there is no service charge on savings accounts. However, a growing number of banks are charging for frequent withdrawals.

Now here are basic rules to help you save.

1) If you have a regular checking account, make sure you don't dip under the maximum balance and invoke a monthly penalty charge. On this type of account, you can eliminate ANY service charge by keeping a big enough balance in the account.

2) If you are being regularly charged for drawing beyond the minimum balance in your checking account, consider transferring money from your savings account. You might be able to save more in charges than you'll lose in interest.

3) If yours is a special checking account and you find that you are writing a rising number of checks, perhaps it would be cheaper to switch to a regular checking account.

4) In either type of account, limit the number of checks you write. Just by writing a single check for $60 in cash instead of six checks for $10 each, you could save 50 cents in service charges. Also, pay as many little bills in cash as you can.

5) Check bank statements immediately when you receive them to make sure that due to some error, you're not about to make a costly overdraft.

6) Make instalment loan payments within the period of time your bank specifies to avoid late charges.

7) Avoid asking for a statement, or even a verbal report, of your checking account balance. A growing number of banks are now charging for such statements because the statements are automatically sent to you. Typical charge is $1.50 for an itemized statement, 50 cents just for looking up the balance.

JIM BISHOP City With a CoverCharge

BERLIN, Germany—The eastern part of this city—behind the Iron Curtain—is the only municipality in the world with a cover charge. The tourist must spend five marks ($1.25) or he will not be permitted to return to "Free" Berlin. He can spend more, but he cannot spend less, and he must be able to prove it with receipts.

But then, both sides of this exciting city are eccentric. At a night club called The Big Apple, I saw girls, practically pre-teen, on the arms of middle-aged men. At the Red Rose, most of the prosperous businessmen who take their secretaries out for an evening spend a good part of the time watching strip-teasers.

East Berlin is a flat expanse of bombed-out churches and apartments, with new bouffant buildings like sugar cubes standing in the ruins. We tried the Cafe Moscow for some coffee and pastry. The layer cakes are too rich, so I ordered an apple turnover. It was triangular, composed of many thin crusts, enclosing a speck of stewed quince. It looked like baked cardboard. My wife took a bite and said: "I don't know whether I read this, or you wrote it."

The four horse quadrige of victory over the Brandenburg Gate used to face toward the Tiergarten in the west. The Communists have turned it so that the horses' tails are turned to the Free city. The liveliest place in the eastern sector is the Russian cemetery. If you want to see live people, this is the place to go.

There is a 60-foot monument of a Russian soldier, stomping his heel on a bent swastika, and holding a baby. Everybody gets the message, but few believe it. A red marble archway to the cemetery was taken from—of all places—Adolf Hitler's Reichschancellery. Today it shields the graves of Russian regiments.

There are bright tourist steamers on the Spree, chugging happily through the floating garbage. The Karl Marx library features few books in English, and among those are the works of Mark Twain and Ring Lardner Jr. I tried to buy a work called Mao Think, but the German lady shook her head and said: "Nossing political." This is amazing when you consider that it is the only game played in East Germany.

Fat old ladies in dungarees and sweaters push brooms along the curbs. This set us to looking for horses. We counted six. At Checkpoint Charlie, it requires thirty minutes for the East Berlin Vopos, in their gray-green uniforms, to examine a passport. They never smile, even at each other. I grinned at one petty official, and he examined my passport all over again. He was shocked to find that I was smiling in there too.

The beautiful new synagogue built on the west side of Berlin was erected, not by the Jews of the city, but by the Christians. Reinhard Marcus, who survived the holocaust and owns a pretty house, is in the real estate business. He says he sees no anti-Semitism in Berlin. None at all. His oldest son, who aspires to be a rabbi, felt that there may be more anti-Semitism in New York or San Francisco than in Berlin.

The Funkturm, which is a 450-foot tower with a restaurant on top, is described in an official guidebook as having "no proper facilities for suicide." The same booklet says of Checkpoint Charlie: "Plenty of fun and games with sour-looking Vopos" (East Berlin police). "The puss there do a roaring trade."

Remember the Freedom Bell the Americans sent to Berlin? It is called "Another handout of Uncle Sam." (We can't keep on saying "Gift of the American people," can we?) The Berlin zoo was bombed heavily in the war. The largest animal to survive is a hippopotamus with a wife and three flabbies and his name is Kanuckelhet.

The entire city is as flat as a glass of water. By day and by night, the ladies who offer themselves for sale stand in the shadows on one foot, then on the other. Apparently, the only thing which shocks them is the first offer. There is a Kongresshalle with 12,000 seats and a roof which is creased downward in the middle. Berliners refer to it as "The pregnant oyster."

Berliners make jokes about everything. There is a gigantic victory column with a gold flowing statue of victory at the top. Of it, Berlin writes: "We are able to reveal that the Great Lady, who stands on the top of this column, is 22 feet tall, weighs 75,000 pounds, and enjoys the facilities of a telephone whose number is 39 29 61." No wonder they keep blowing those wars...

More Harm Than Good

WASHINGTON—Increasingly, government advisory committees are becoming a shadowy branch of government exercising great powers, largely unscrutinized and unaccountable to the taxpayers.

There are literally hundreds of advisory committees throughout the government, many of them populated with representatives of the special interests. Through these committees, food processors help make policy for farmers, and producers recommend government action on behalf of consumers.

All too often the advisory committee's chief contribution is to provide the government agency with an excuse to avoid solving painful problems. The agency simply turns the problems over to the appropriate committee to study, then waits interminably for recommendations which can be blamed on outside advisors.

In this way, the advisory committee takes the heat off the government officials, who can draw their pay with a minimum of responsibility.

One of the best examples of how erosive an advisory committee can be is the Advisory Committee on Traffic Safety, which has been shaping policy for the Health, Education, and Welfare Department. The committee is headed by Daniel P. Moynihan, able Director of Urban Studies at Harvard.

The most influential member is Moynihan's close personal friend, Dr. William Haddon, Jr., who is Director of Traffic Safety at the Transportation Department. Thus the head of a competing agency, the Transportation Department, sits on an advisory council that is determining policy for a rival agency—HEW.

From the first, Haddon has displayed a hostility to HEW's traffic safety personnel and has not hesitated to give out biting, jarring attacks on them at advisory committee meetings. Naturally, this has embittered the HEW safety people and has resulted in a near total lack of cooperation between the rival traffic safety agencies—which, of course, makes the American public the loser.

Real fact is the Moynihan-Haddon committee had been in existence less than a month before it delivered a sweeping, unsubstantiated attack upon the HEW people who were working on traffic safety. The attack took the form of a scathing, confidential report, still classified, to Secretary John Gardner. This column has obtained a copy.

Piling invective upon invective, the Moynihan-Haddon committee said of Haddon's rivals: "This has been a dead bureaucracy; defensive, secretive, even at times hostile. Incapable of initiative on its own, it has viewed the efforts of others as threats..."

"The responsibility of the Division of Accident Prevention was to be a center of critical and rigorous intelligence on this subject within the federal government, and it failed in that

JAMES RESTON

Variations on a Theme

(c) N.Y. Times News Service WASHINGTON—Secretary of State Dean Rusk is now, in many ways, the most intriguing personality in Washington. He has emerged as the principal defender of the administration's Vietnam policy because he is the most eloquent of the true believers in the President's Cabinet.

He is a simpler man than either President Johnson or Secretary of Defense McNamara, and more articulate. He spent formative professional years in the China-India-Burma theatre during the last world war, and was assistant Secretary of State for Far Eastern affairs during the period when Washington was concentrating on Europe, and he sees the present leaders of China as the greatest menace to the Security of the United States and the continuity of Western civilization since Hitler.

In a time when his own colleagues in the Department of State, his old friends in the press and the Congress, and even other members of the Cabinet have the most serious doubts about the administration's policy in Vietnam, Rusk's conviction, eloquence, and personality are critical factors in the present debate on policy. Nobody involved in the present Vietnam debate, whether in the White House, the Congress, or the universities, suspects him of personal ambition. He is both broke and honest. During these last few agonizing years, he could have escaped into many prestigious jobs in universities or foundations, but he has stuck it out, and this is precisely the problem. For while everybody admires his loyalty, even his closest associates in the State Department, for which he is responsible, question his judgment. He is modest, loyal, articulate, but is he right? He is determined to unify Asia, Europe, Latin America and Africa—a noble ambition, but how can he do it if he can't even unify his own department?

Rusk's loyalty to Johnson and conviction about the integrity of Johnson's policy in Vietnam are so solid that he has taken the job of defending them before the press. He was so sure that he was right that the State Department appealed to the television networks this week to put him on their national hookups. (They refused on the ground that he had no new great policy changes to announce.) But he met the press anyway, and had a personal triumph.

The trouble was that his policy left his listeners about where they were before. He argued that "Asian Communism" was a serious menace to the security of the United States; that the United States was not in a "stalemate" in Vietnam but was moving toward "victory"; that the United States must above all things create order in Asia; and that we could do this even if we kept our commitment to withdraw from South Vietnam and destroy all our bases there within six months of a compromise peace settlement.

This proved to be good theatre but bad policy. The reporters admired his style and courage but not his formula for peace. They liked his loyalty, optimism, and appealing conviction, but they simply didn't be-responsibility, opting instead for a banality and self-assurance very near to ignorance.

"Impervious alike to the exhortations of Presidents and the imprecations of reformers, it chugged along in idleness until a near crisis arose and its work was done by others... New men, new organization and a new sense of the possibilities of public service are as much needed as new money."

These assertions were not backed up with evidence. They were merely offered as unsupported conclusions before the committee had scarcely settled down to its study.

Result has been rampant demoralization of the HEW's traffic safety personnel and program. Dr. Paul Joliet, who had been running the program, resigned in disgust. Other topflight researchers were deeply disillusioned by the sweep of the Moynihan-Haddon indictment. Recruitment has been difficult—too difficult. The whole spirit of the program has been scuttled.

There is no accountability or control on the power of such advisory committees which can wreak their havoc, demoralize agencies, and disband, leaving raw feelings and resentment. Even the good that such committees can do is lost because they are looked upon as outsiders having authority but no follow-through responsibility.

What the Advisory Committee on Traffic Safety has actually done is to paralyze an agency's activities in traffic safety, and provoke uncertainty and resentment.

Ambassador Wymberley Coerr, who was unceremoniously bounced out of Ecuador, was doing one of the best jobs of the many highly qualified ambassadors the State Department has sent lately to Latin America.

Coerr, however, was up against the fact that Ecuador is one of the poorest countries in South America and has a two-crop economy, bananas and cocoa, and the United States has dealt cavalierly with the prices of both. What Latin America needs more than foreign aid are stable price supports on cocoa, bananas, coffee, and tin.

As a result of Ecuador's fluctuating economy, few presidents have finished out their terms, and President Arosemena Gomez, who tangled with Ambassador Coerr, was installed by the military as a stopgap. Under the circumstances he is doing a good job, but operates with a chip on his shoulder.

He was the only Latin American president who rubbed LBJ the wrong way at the Pan American Summit Conference last April. Sparks flew between the two men the minute they met each other, and Arosemena later refused to sign the Punta del Este agreement.

President Johnson had spent 48 hours studying the personalities of each Latin American president in advance and got along famously with everyone except Arosemena.

Note: The ambassador's attractive wife Janet is a specialist on writing children's books, has published some of the most popular illustrated books for small children.

Don't Have Any Eyeballs

HARRISBURG—Columnist's Notebook: BUREAUCRATIC COOPERATION—When it comes down to seeing eye to eye on anything, or for that matter even looking in the same general direction, administration Republicans and anti-administration Democrats in Pennsylvania's Legislature don't seem to have any eyeballs at all.

For example as the legislative greats gathered this week to (in theory) thrash out some sort of solution to the "taxlash" ills and aches that have plagued them for the past three and a half months, Democrats insisted any next move in the stalemate was up to Republicans, while Republicans said they were waiting for word from their colleagues on the other side of the aisle.

Or, as one lawmaker quipped: "It's something like the strike stalemate out at the Ford Motor Company—neither side wants to give in, and boy is it costly for both. The only difference in this case is that the 'both' in the end will be Pennsylvania's tax payers!"

EXHORTING HIS BRAVES—Each week House Democratic Floor Leader Herbert Fienman cranks out a brief letter to his 98 colleagues in the lower chamber, reminding of the upcoming week's session, urging them to be on hand and oftentimes throwing in a note of urgency or referring to a potentially prime subject that may be in the offing.

Quoth the bespectacled gent in his tome referring to this week's gathering:

"With only four of five legislative weeks left prior to December 1st, I would assume that lackadaisical Ray would finally urge his legislative generals to push hard on their program as well as taxes. I must insist that all hands be on board."

THE GREAT MACHINE AGE—Pennsylvania's legislative branch is just about ready to follow in the tracks of the executive branch insofar as automatic data processing is concerned. For the past couple of months technicians and those who know about the blinking lights and whirling tapes have been riddling in the basement of the Main Capitol Building with the gear and equipment.

The idea is, for example, that a lawmaker can press a button and have his answers within a flash on such items as the status of a particular piece of legislation, etc. It's quite flashy. In any event, at the National Legislative Conference in Texas during the past two weeks a demonstration team was on hand to show visiting lawmakers how Pennsylvania is doing the job.

One local lawmaker walked into the demonstration room, crowded with poorly lawmakers from other states. The charming lass operating the contraption asked the lawmaker his name, noting that he was from Pennsylvania, pressed a button—and to the local lawmaker's astonishment there appeared on the screen (in a flash) his biography, a record of the number of bills he had sponsored, how many and what bills of his had been signed into law, his committee assignments, etc.

"Holy cats," exclaimed the lawmaker to this column this week, "I didn't realize I had sponsored all those bills. About the only thing they hadn't programmed was where I had dinner the night before—and they better not program that!"

QUOTE OF THE WEEK—Governor Shafer this week keynoted a seminar of some 1200 state employees assembled to hear about his cost reduction program designed to nip administrative costs by some $18 million a year but it was his budget secretary, Arthur F. Sampson, who (inadvertently perhaps) during his somewhat extended illustrated lecture, opined:

"An all-out war will be waged against wasted motion and manpower."

All of which prompted one wag to comment: "What motion?"

'Life' Changes Editorial Policy on Vietnam Bombing

Y HENRY RAYMONT
(c) N.Y. Times News Service
NEW YORK — Life Magazine
a shift in editorial policy, it will call next week for a pause in the bombing of North Vietnam to create better conditions for a peace initiative and improve national and international confidence in the Johnson Administration's policy.
The Life editorial asks that like the six previous pauses,

this time there should be no publicly announced "conditions" which could carry "the whiff of an ultimatum."
While the editorial praises President Johnson for having shown "a remarkable blend of resolution and restraint" in his conduct of the war, it argues that in articulating its Vietnam policy "the President and his Administration have become more and more glaringly unsuccessful."

The editorial, to appear in the issue dated Oct. 30 which reaches the newsstands next Monday, will mark the first time that the magazine has explicitly departed from its previous support of the Johnson Administration's Southeast Asian policies.

The shift was regarded by executives of Time, Inc., the Publishers of Life, as the most important editorial position since the magazine endorsed Johnson for President in 1964.
Up to then Life had backed only Republican national tickets.

In releasing the text of the editorial three days before the regular advance copies of the magazine are made available to the press, a Life spokesman said that the decision on the editorial position was made by Hedley Donovan, editor in chief of Time, Inc.

It was pointed out, however, that because of the importance of the editorial Donovan had been in close consultation with Andrew Heskell, chairman of the board, and James A. Linen, president. The three men form the ruling triumvirate of the $500 million Time communications empire.

The internal debate at Life apparently began before June 13, when Donovan made a commencement speech at New York University titled "on the possibility of being wrong." In the speech he urged that "a certain measure of modesty and generosity" be allowed to moderate the national debate over Vietnam.

The speech and doubts about Washington's policy that time executives were voicing in private suggested to some editors in the organization that an editorial change was impending.

In advocating the bombing pause, Life makes clear that the move should "not be a commitment to stop the bombing indefinitely." It also would exempt the southern provinces adjoining the demilitarized zone from the moratorium.

The editorial acknowledges that "almost all U.S. military opinion opposes such a course," but said it believes "the benefits of a bombing pause at this time outweigh the short-term military cost."

"The bombing has isolated the U.S. from most of its friends and allies throughout the world and in this country the bombing is the focus and catalyst of most of the opposition to the war," the magazine states.

PLAN SOAP BOX DERBY

For the first time in about eight years Warren may host a Soap Box Derby competition. The competition, under the sponsorship of the Warren Jaycees, is expected to be held sometime next July. Last night at a meeting held at Penn Laurel Motel, Richard Crumlish, Buffalo, N.Y., outlined to the Jaycees the procedure necessary for conducting a local soap box derby under the auspices of the All-American Soap Box Derby. Although plans for the derby have not yet been completed, Jaycees said last night a formal announcement of plans and qualifications necessary for applicants should be announced sometime after the first of the year. (Photo by

Can Count on 20,000 Troops for Race Riots

INDIANTOWN GAP, Pa. (AP)
— Pennsylvania officials could count on assistance from up to 20,000 regular Army troops if racial disorders break out in the state's major cities.

A spokesman at Indiantown Gap Military Reservation said yesterday the availability of regular Army troops for emergency duty was announced last month by Maj. Gen. C. E.
Johnson, deputy commander of the 15-state 1st Army Area.

Gen. Johnson met with Pennsylvania military, State Police and civil defense officials at the Gap on Sept. 26 to coordinate plans for quelling civil disturbances, the spokesman said.

In a report to the state officials, Gen. Johnson said 20-000 troops under his command, including the 101st Airborne Division, could be deployed to assist State Police and National Guard units if riots flare in urban areas.

Gen. Johnson said the Department of the Army has designated 96 potential trouble spots across the nation—five of them in Pennsylvania—where regular Army troops would be sent if they are needed.

The five potential trouble spots in Pennsylvania were not identified, but the spokesman said they "apparently include Pittsburgh and Philadelphia."

The spokesman said Gen. Johnson stressed that the Army was not questioning the Pennsylvania National Guard's ability to handle emergency situations, but was offering additional help.

"The general had high praise for the Pennsylvania National Guard," the spokesman said.

Gov. Shafer had announced earlier that his emergency plan for putting down civil disturbances called for both State Police and National Guard troops, under a unified State Police command.

Salinger's JCC Talk Postponed

JAMESTOWN, N. Y. — Officials at Jamestown Community College announced yesterday that the scheduled appearance of Pierre Salinger at the college has been postponed until Feb. 23. It was also announced that comedian and social critic Dick Gregory scheduled to appear in February will instead speak next Wednesday night in the student lounge.

Gregory an out-spoken leader in the civil rights movement is one of the most popular speakers on American College campuses. Two weeks ago he announced his candidacy for the presidency. No charge will be made to the public to attend the 8 p.m. lecture.

Salinger former press secretary to John F. Kennedy is now scheduled to make an appearance at JCC on Feb. 23. The college officials said they received word yesterday Salinger had undergone surgery for a back injury and is enroute to California in a cast.

Johnson Issues Another Appeal For Tax Increase

By MAX FRANKEL

(c) N.Y. Times News Service
WASHINGTON — President Johnson issued another of his almost daily appeals for a tax increase yesterday, but there is growing doubt at the White House that he can thus rally sufficient public or congress-sional support.

The President's last chance for action this year—which his aides insist he still wants—therefore depends now on a behind-the-scenes campaign to apply pressure on the Congress through major business, labor and consumer organizations.

The precise nature of this campaign has not been disclosed by the White House. Apparently it involves chambers of commerce, union leaders and the commercial contacts of every cabinet officer and major government agency.

In the meantime, Johnson has been steering clear of Congress, whose leaders have told him they do not now have the votes to force the issue. The purpose of the President's public pronouncements is to avoid the impression—already widespread on Capitol Hill—that he has really given up hope.

Some of his aides have asked Johnson to consider a more direct appeal to the country, possibly with a televised "chalk talk" on the economic facts of life as he sees them. But the President, noting that "you'll never get pickets asking for higher taxes," has expressed doubt that he can ignite a public clamor for the proposed 10 per cent surcharge on individual and corporate income taxes.

The evidence available to the White House suggests that the proposal for a tax increase last August severely depressed Johnson's standing in the popularity polls and increased opposition to the war in Vietnam.
The President's principal argument is that the nation has no choice, given the costs of the war and the already curtailed spending for federal health, education and welfare programs. There will be either a tax surcharge and a relatively modest inflation next year or a sharp increase in prices, which he calls an "inflation tax."

In speaking yesterday to cabinet members and other high officials who serve on his committee on consumer interests, the President said that a family of four with an income of $5,000 would pay no tax surcharge at all under his proposal but would lose $147 through inflation next year without it. A family earning $20,000, he said, would lose $316 to inflation without a surcharge, or $224 more than under higher taxes.

These figures apparently were based on estimates that prices could rise up to 5 per cent next year without a tax increase.
Johnson has previously said that the experts estimated price increases of 2 to 3 per cent if there was a tax surcharge.

The government's underlying contention is that a tax increase should reduce the budget deficit by $7 billion and restrain the nation's purchasing power to that extent, thus holding down the demand for investment loans, avoiding a rise in interest rates and an even sharper rise in prices and wage demands.

Announce 47 Proposed Safety Standards

By JOHN D. MORRIS
(c) N.Y. Times News Service
WASHINGTON—The federal government proposed 10 new auto safety standards yesterday for possible imposition on Jan. 1, 1969, and others for longer range study.
Those proposed for 1969 include devices to restrain infants from being tossed around in crashes and other relatively minor innovations.

Most major changes advocated by safety experts were listed for possible imposition at unspecified times after January of 1969.

The Federal Highway Administration, in announcing the proposals, invited interested parties to submit written data, views and arguments on them.

Under the 1966 National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act, the final version of standards for 1969 are supposed to be issued before next Feb. 1.

The 10 outlined yesterday would supplement the first standards issued under the act, most of which are to be effective Next Jan. 1.

They were described by Dr. William Haddon Jr., director of the National Highway Safety Bureau, as follows:
—"New systems for protective restraint of small children in car crashes.

—"Performance requirements for brake linings on cars, trucks, buses, motorcycles and trailers.

—"Performance criteria to eliminate damaging features of exterior protrusions on vehicles.

—"Protective features on motorcycles, such as roll bars, foot rests and exhaust system protection.

—"Warning devices for vehicles stopped in emergencies, such as flashing lights.

—"Mounting of windshields to prevent their dislodging in auto crashes, thus protecting occupants from being thrown through windshield openings.

—"Requirements to preclude inadvertent opening of auto hoods.

—"Safe-to-open pressure radiator caps.

—"Requirements for 'fail-safe' reliability of head lamp covers, movable headlamps and similar devices.

—"Specification of visibility requirements for vehicle identification numbers on passenger cars, to facilitate quick identification."

Full details were lacking. The unofficial explanation was that they would be devised later, after consideration of written comments.

In a formal document outlining the proposals, the highway administration said "appropriate requirements" for infant and child restraint systems were to be considered. It said they included rearward-facing infant seats, forward facing infant seats and portable cribs and playpens for use in motor vehicles.

Proposed performance requirements for brake linings, according to the document, include specifications for friction, fade and wear characteristics.

The new standard on exterior protrusions, the agency stated, would apply to nonessential devices that increased the risk of injury to pedestrians and cyclists on impact.

The proposed warning devices for stopped vehicles would be similar to those now required for interstate motor carriers, including flares, red cloth flags, red electric lanterns and red emergency reflectors.

Requirements for radiator caps, the agency said, would include a means for relieving radiator pressure, such as an intermediate step, before the cap is disengaged from the radiator filler neck.

Regarding "fail-safe" reliability of headlamp devices, the agency said it was specifically considering requirements
"to insure the reliability of the components," such as hoses, valves, springs and motors "under extreme environmental and aging conditions."

No further detail was given in the agency's formal document on proposals for motorcycle safety devices, windshield mountings, hoods and identification numbers.

Two Escape Serious Injury

Two people escaped serious injury yesterday in a two car crash on Route 62 about nine ing to state police of the local operated by Thomas A. Glo-sick, 49, of Irvine crashed into a car operated by Ariel Leroy Kimes, 54, of 815 First st.,

According to police the Kimes vehicle was travelling south on Route 62 and attempted a left hand turn moving into the path of the Glosick vehicle travelling north on Route 62.

Damage in the accident was estimated at $800 to each vehicle, police said.

GIBSON HURLS CARDINALS TO CHAMPIONSHIP

'Bullet Bob' Series Star, 'Does It All'

By MURRAY CHASS

BOSTON (AP)—Orlando Cepeda, St. Louis, spirited first baseman, broke through the mob surrounding Bob Gibson, grabbed him around the neck and kissed him on the right cheek four times.

"You can do it all...you can do it all," Cepeda gushed to Gibson, the man who had just done it all.

What Gibson just had done was pitch a three-hitter, hit a home run and fire the Cardinals to a 7-2 triumph over the Boston Red Sox in yesterday's seventh and deciding game of the world series.

The performance gave the 31-year-old right-hander three straight complete game victories in the series, and in the three contests he allowed just three runs, 14 hits and struck out 26—five short of the series record he set in 1964 when the Cardinals beat the New York Yankees in seven games.

In that series, he also won the seventh game plus one before that and now has won five straight complete games in series play.

His pitching in this year's spectacle was even more amazing because he suffered a broken right leg July 15 and wasn't back on the mound until Sept. 6.

"If you do the same thing each year," Gibson said between sips from a large champagne bottle, "Each time you do it seems bigger than the last. As you get a little older, maybe you cherish these things a little more."

One thing Gibson had to cherish this year that he didn't have in 1964 was the towering 380-foot home run he hit off Jim Lonborg in the fifth inning—the run, incidentally, that turned out to be the winning run since it was St. Louis, third.

It was all the more interesting because of what Gibson was saying before the game.

"I don't hit much anymore," commented the 6-foot-11½, 195-pounder who has been considered one of the better hitting pitchers in the majors.

"I have to concentrate on my pitching. Anyway I'm getting old, my reflexes are slower and my eyes aren't as good."

After the game he had a slightly different explanation.

"If a pitcher gets a reputation for being a pretty good hitter, the other pitchers are as tough on him as they are on everyone else," Gibson said. "All season long they threw me curve balls on the outside, and I can't hit a curve ball outside."

Lonborg, however, made the mistake of throwing his opponent a fast ball.

"I hit it good, didn't I?" Gibson asked, breaking into a huge grin. "I knew it was going to hit the wall, but I didn't think it was going out."

As he stood in the riotous Cardinal dressing room, it was easy to see that his life now is in sharp contrast to his early years in Omaha, Neb.

"My dad died a month before I was born," Gibson related. "I was the youngest of seven children, and my mother worked in a laundry to support us. She didn't make a heck of a lot of money."

"When I was 15 she remarried, but she still had to work to support us. Finally when I graduated from high school, I got a basketball scholarship from Creighton."

Gibson majored in Sociology and then signed with the Cardinals in 1957. The rest of his story is one of success, including a short span with the famous Harlem Globetrotters Basketball team.

"I think I would have won at least 20 games if I hadn't broken my leg," said Gibson who wound up 13-7.

SCENE REPEATED AGAIN

It was another St. Louis mob scene yesterday after the 7-2 triumph over Boston in the final game of the World Series, like the one that took place on September 18 (above) when the Cardinals defeated the Phillies, 5-1, to clinch the National League pennant. Winning pitcher Bob Gibson was in the middle of that one, too.

'Beautiful' Cards' Only Word for Pressure Win

By BEN BROWN

Associated Press Sports Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Beautiful! That was the word heard most often in the St. Louis clubhouse yesterday as the Cardinals celebrated their 7-2 victory over Boston in the seventh and deciding game of the 1967 World Series.

Dal Maxvill, whose triple started the Redbird scoring, sipped champagne and said: "When we get the hammer on a ball club, we're going to win most of the time."

The National League champions got the hammer on the Red Sox with two runs in the third inning. Big Bob Gibson, the winning pitcher, got the third and what proved to be the deciding run himself with a home run at the flagpole in left center field.

Lou Brock, who erased a 58-year-old record when he wiped second in the ninth inning, said he was aware that he could set a record. "When you can do that, you try if you get the chance," he said.

"Boston kept bouncing back in the series," Brock explained, "but we knew we must win today."

"We haven't had a pressure game since July 24 (when Chicago briefly tied the Cards for the National League lead)," Brock said. "This is the first time since then that we had a 'must' win."

Julian Javier, the St. Louis second baseman, put the game out of reach with a homer to left field in the sixth inning, knocking in three runs.

"I wasn't trying to hit the ball hard," Javier said. "I hit it and it went up there."

Javier said that had the Redbirds' two big guns—Orlando Cepeda and Tim McCarver—hit better in the Series "we could have beat them in five games."

"But we win like this all year—someone picks up someone else," Javier explained.

Red Schoendienst, who has a world championship in his third season as manager, said he never was close to taking Gibson out of the game.

"But if I had walked Ken Harrelson in the ninth, I would have seriously considered it," Schoendienst said. Harrelson hit into a double play and Gibson struck out George Scott to end the game.

"He was tired," Schoendienst continued, "and I had Nelson Briles in good shape in the bullpen. Gibson wasn't as sharp this time as in the first game—but he didn't have to be."

When asked what he said to the team before the game, the St. Louis skipper replied: "Nothing. I gave the ball to Gibson."

Schoendienst said that he felt the difference between the two clubs was pitching.

"Good pitching will beat good hitting every time," he said.

Roger Maris, the St. Louis right fielder who had eight hits in the Series, praised Boston.

Williams: 'Nothing To Be Ashamed Of'

BOSTON (AP) — "We have nothing to be ashamed of—give them credit—they deserve it."

Dick Williams, winding up his rookie season as manager of the Boston Red Sox, saluted the St. Louis Cardinals yesterday after the National League champions won the seventh and deciding game of the world series 7-2 behind Bob Gibson's three-hit pitching.

"Give all the credit in the world to Gibson," Williams said. "He's one helluva pitcher. I would have to say he was the outstanding player in the series. After all, he beat us three times."

Williams was surrounded by reports making virtually the only noise in the cemetery—like clubhouse. He praised St. Louis, but had glowing words for his Red Sox.

"I still like this club," he said. "We have nothing to be ashamed of, nothing at all. This is a young club and we had to work one game harder all season. I'm proud of them all. And we'll be back next year."

Red Sox owner Tom Yawkey, accompanied by Dick O'Connell, vice president and general manager, walked around the clubhouse, patting players on the back and thanking them.

"This has been a great season," Yawkey said. "I have a lot of happy memories."

Boston ace Jim Lonborg, pounded for all seven St. Louis runs in six innings while trying to pitch with only two days rest and slugger Carl Yastrzemski hid in a closed training room for nearly one-half hour after "They had a good ball club," he said.

"I learned when I was with the (New York) Yankees that you take all teams seriously, and you don't anticipate a team can be handled lightly," Maris said.

Maxvill, who made the final out in the 1964 World Series in which the Cardinals beat the Yankees, was asked if he wanted to make the final out this time. Maxvill thought a minute and said:

"No, I wanted it to end just like it did—Bob Gibson striking out the last batter."

The strong-throwing Cardinal right-hander, working with three days rest after Sunday's shutout, had a no-hitter going until Scott opened the fifth with a triple off the wall in center. Scott came all the way home to score when Julian Javier's relay throw sailed past third base into the Cards' dugout.

Boston picked up another mean-nothing run in the eighth on a double by Rico Petrocelli, a wild pitch and pinch hitter Norm Siebern's force out.

Manager Red Schoendienst went out to talk with Gibson in the seventh when he went 2-1 on Ken Harrelson after Carl Yastrzemski walked. Pitching coach Billy Muffett went to the mound in the eighth after the wild pitch to pinch hitter Dalton Jones. Red made the stroll again in the ninth after Yaz opened with a single. Gibson obviously pleaded to stay and got permission.

The next man, Harrelson, grounded into a double play and Gibson struck out Scott.

As a reward for his three wins, Gibson was named the winner of the sports car annually given to the outstanding player of the Series by Sport Magazine.

It was a brilliant comeback for Gibson who was out of action from July 15 to Sept. 6 with a broken leg and barely regained his sharpness in time for the Series.

The Series triumph, the Cards' fourth in a row, meant about $9,000 to each St. Louis player. Each of the losing Red Sox will get about $5,000 but they already had enough glory for their spectacular rise from ninth place in 1966 to the pennant in 1967 on the final day of the season.

If it was a day of wild excitement for the Red Birds, it was a cloudy, cool afternoon of heartbreak for Lonborg, the handsome Stanford graduate who had pitched so magnificently in winning his first two starts.

Trying to bounce back without sufficient rest, Gentleman Jim was bombed by the Cards and was left in there to take a rough going over in the sixth when Javier's three-run homer drove the final nails in the Red Sox's coffin.

The Red Sox fought mightily in an effort to become the fourth club ever to overcome a 3-1 deficit in games but Gibson was just too much for them.

The hand writing was on the wall for Lonborg, who had a perfect game going for 6 1-3 innings.

Three-Hitter, Homer Rip Weary Jim Lonborg, 7-2

By JACK HAND

Associated Press Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP)—Big Bob Gibson made a mockery of his celebrated duel with a tired Jim Lonborg by winning the World Series for the St. Louis Cardinals with a three-hitter and a home run in a 7-2 romp over the Boston Red Sox in yesterday's seventh game.

Lonborg, a two-time winner trying to come back with only two days' rest, simply didn't have it and was battered for 10 hits and all seven runs in six innings.

Gibson became the seventh member of the tight little circle of men who have compiled 3-0 Series records and tied Red Ruffing's 26-year-old record by winning his fifth complete game over a two-series span. The last previous three-game winner in Series play was Lew Burdette of Milwaukee in 1957.

Speedy Lou Brock set a Series record of seven stolen bases and tied two more marks with three in one game and two in an inning as the Cards, who once held a 3-1 edge in this competition, finally closed it out with a victory before 35,188 fans at Fenway Park.

Brock who finished up with 12 hits, one short of another record, wound up with a .414 batting average. The last time a base stealer shined so brightly in a Series was Pepper Martin for the 1931 Cards' Gas House Gang when he stole five and batted .500 against the old Philadelphia A's.

As Gibson struck out George Scott, his 10th victim, for the final out of the Series, a wild mob of Cardinals sped to the mound to shake his hand and pound his back. A young man grabbed Orlando Cepeda's cap and raced for safety past a line of tackle minded special guards. One cop finally brought him to earth and the cap was saved to the boos of the crowd.

Gibson had won the opener 2-1, the fourth game 6-0 and now closed it out by allowing a total of 14 hits, the lowest for three complete games since Christy Mathewson's three shutouts and 14 hits for the New York Giants in 1905.

The strong-throwing Cardinal right-hander, working with three days rest after Sunday's shutout, had a no-hitter going until Scott opened the fifth with a triple off the wall in center. BACK TO GASHOUSE DAYS

Lou Brock dives head-first into second base for one of his record seven stolen bases. Brock's 12 hits for a .414 average was the best for a base-stealer since Pepper Martin of the 1931 Cards' "Gas House Gang" stole five and batted .500.

nings and a no-hitter for 7 2-3 innings in this same park a week ago. But Roger Maris, a hitting star for the Cards, singled in the first and Javier, another big swinger for the Cards, singled in the second.

Little Dal Maxvill, a good fielder, no-hit shortstop, hammered a 400-foot triple off the center field wall opening the third. After Gibson lined out to Joe Foy and Brock popped out, Curt Flood singled to center, scoring Maxvill. Maris followed with his second single and Flood scored when Lonborg uncorked a wild pitch to Cepeda.

Guarding a 2-0 lead, Gibson took matters into his own hands in the fifth when he slugged a 380-foot homer high off the green wall in center field, just to the right of the yellow line that separates doubles from home runs.

Then Brock, the speed bullet, put on his show. Lou singled to left and stole second on the second out pitch to Flood. Brock also stole third on the fourth out pitch, tying the record for two steals in an inning, held Ruth in 1921. Maris' sacrifice fly knocked in Brock for a 4-0 lead.

Lonborg obviously was struggling but he was left in to take another beating in the sixth when Tim McCarver doubled on a ball that right fielder Harrelson dove for but couldn't hold as he rolled over on the grass.

Mike Shannon got a life on an error by Foy and Javier led it with a 350-foot homer high off the screen wall in center field, just to the right of the yellow line left field wall.

Despite the 7-0 deficit, Manager Dick Williams left Lonborg in the last of the sixth and then got two perfect innings of relief ball from Jose Santiago.

Dave Morehead walked the bases full in the ninth but the Red Sox escaped without further scoring by using Dan Oslinski and finally 19-year-old Ken Brett to put down the rally.

Right to the bitter end, Yastrzemski was in there swinging that big bat. He opened the ninth with a single that gave him a .400 Series but Harrelson's double play and Scott's strikeout ended it.

The stolen base record that Brock erased had been held jointly by Jim Slagle of the 1907 Chicago Cubs and Honus Wagner of the 1909 Pittsburgh Pirates. The two thefts in the fifth tied the old mark and his steal of second base in the ninth set a new standard of seven for a series.

As a foreboding of things to come, a black cloud of smoke curled over the left field wall right after Maxvill unloaded his triple in the third. The fire in a freight car soon was under control but the Cards already had pushed Lonborg and the Red Sox beyond the point of no return.

Gibson had won the outstanding player award in 1964 when he lost his first start to the New York Yankees but came back to win his next two, including the seventh with only two days of rest. He struck out 31 in that series and wound up with 26 in this one in a performance that has to earn him a healthy raise from owner Gusie Busch.

The victory cut the American League's over-all Series edge to 38-26 and boosted the Cards' Series mark to 8-3, the last four in succession in 1944, 1946, 1964 and 1967. The Red Sox, losing their second series to three wins, had not been in one since they lost to the Cards in 1946.

Although Gibson was one short of the Series record of six victories held jointly by Lefty Gomez and Ruffing, his five complete games equalled Ruffing's Yankee feats in 1937, 1938, 1939 and 1941.

Williams told his Red Sox to hold their heads high as he spoke in the clubhouse after the game. "You have nothing to be ashamed of," he said.

Those Officials Again

Greed is being unhappy with a 15-5 week. The Red Sox threw a scare into us by pushing the Series to seven games, but Bob Gibson, Lou Brock & Company bounced back yesterday to win it four games to three instead of 4-2 as we had predicted last week. Last week's wrong picks were Youngsville-Randolph East Mead (We were right about a letdown by the Eagle defense), Corry's upset of Jamestown (who can foresee penalties), Nichols Prep's romp over Olean (47-13), Bradford's 20-7 loss to Erie Academy (we had it 20-7 for the Owls) and Saegertown's triumph over Townville.

The Olean and Jamestown defeats were the biggest misses (we saw the Huskies winning 27-14 and gave the Red Raiders a 25-14 edge over the Beavers). Closest picks were: Conneaut Valley 35, Cambridge Springs 0 (we predicted 34-0) and St. Marys 19, Kane 7 (19-6).

Getting back to the Jamestown-Corry game, Raider Coach Tony Nunes was very unhappy about the 74½ yards in penalties stepped off against his team (to none for the Beavers) and didn't care who knew it. The Jamestown Post-Journal quoted him as saying, "It was the most disgusting exhibition of officiating" and "Personally, I'm going to try to break relations with Corry." (It was Nunes' first loss at Jamestown).

Lou Hanna, the Dean of Area Football Coaches, countered with "This fellow (Nunes) is a bag of hot wind--Nunes won't have to worry about breaking off football relations--we'll do it for him." The Post-Journal also quoted Lou as saying "After he's been around a while he'll learn as I did that you win some and you lose some, hollering about it afterwards doesn't do any good."

Since the game, the fires have been fanned by a letter to the Post-Journal from a Jamestown mother, an open letter to Nunes from the sports editor of the Corry Journal and an invitation to Raider fans to attend the viewing of the game film to check on the officials' calls.

Our only comment is that, reportedly, a couple of the officials for the Jamestown-Olean game (won by the Raiders, 14-12) are teachers in the Jamestown system.

We'll reserve other opinions until after the Dragon-Red Raider contest at Jamestown next Saturday night.

So, figuring the refs may have cost us a few points on our season total of 66 right, 24 wrong for .736, we hope for honest officiating this week as we guess:

Warren 21, Olean 19

We see a Dragon letdown and a determined effort by a winless, but hungry, Olean team making it a close game. The Blue and White took the Huskies too easy last season and came away with a defeat and history may repeat. "Garro" Sorensen's foot saves the day.

Sheffield 13, Youngsville 13

If you think we're going to pick a winner here, think again. It's bad enough to have the Eagle fans mad at you, but Wolverine rooters are something else again. The way both teams have been playing, maybe no one will win. Count this as one wrong right now.

Eisenhower 19, Forestville 13

Don't ask us why. The Knights have hurt us this season, but if they can't handle the Hornets (up from a Class C league), we'll scrap our typewriter and Ike fans will scrap their last hope.

Titusville 20, Corry 13

Strictly a hunch pick. The Beavers are an improving ballclub and proved it against Jamestown, but the Rockets are always tough at home. We got in on good authority that Gene McNamara's passes will be too much for the Orange and Black.

Oil City 13, Meadville 6

The battle(?) of two beatens. Someone has to win their first game and the Oilers show more offense. With our luck, watch it end in a scoreless tie.

Jamestown 33, West Seneca 13

Where's West Seneca? The Raiders have the team to bounce back for a victory before running into the Dragons. Besides, the game is on Raider turf and the officials won't be imported from Pennsylvania.

Other Games:

Ridgway 27, Curwensville 20
Saegertown 27, Cambridge Springs 6

East Forest Wins

East Forest out-scored West Forest 12-8 yesterday in UAVL baseball. Dennis Hoover, Rick Anders and Ron Covell lead the Bears attack with two hits apiece. Jim Gatesman won his fourth game of the year as Anders starred in relief.

Huffman lead the West Forest attack with three hits and Donato bombed a triple for West Forest. The loss was charged to Kagle.

Sparta Bumped, 2-0

North Clarion slipped by Spartansburg last night 2-0. The game was played on the Clarion diamond as Zacheral hurled up a one-hitter.

Brent Allen was tagged with the Sparta loss. Clarion scored both its runs in the first inning and managed to keep their lead.

Tidioute Nipped

The Tidioute Bears fell to Pleasantville last night, 6-5. Pleasantville pulled ahead in the top of the seventh and Tidioute came back in the bottom to score one run, but it was not enough.

The game was won by Fogle for Pleasantville. Ed King and Rondinelli shared the loss for Tidioute. Fogle banged a double for the winning cause. A round-tripper was bombed by Anthony in the fourth inning to insure the Pleasantville victory.

Mark Rondinelli snagged a double and Ron Carr smashed a homer, both for Tidioute. Tidioute now carries a 3-7 slate.

The Yellow Jackets closed the gap between themselves and the pace-setting Aztecs to only 24 points in the latest balloting by a national panel of 15 sports writers and broadcasters.

Waynesburg, averaging 57.5 points for four games, including last Saturday's 61-6 conquest of California, Pa., figures to overpower Frostburg, Md., this Saturday.

Both Pro Cage Circuits Opening Seasons Tonite

By BEN OLAN
Associated Press Sports Writer
The expanded National Basketball Association and its new rival, the 11-team American Basketball Association, open their 1967-68 seasons tonite with West Coast games featuring three fledgling clubs. The first games are Seattle at San Francisco in the NBA and Anaheim at Oakland in the ABA.

The addition of the SuperSonics, representing Seattle, and the San Diego Rockets increased the number of teams in the NBA to 12.

Al Bianchi, an assistant coach of Chicago's NBA team last year, is the SuperSonics' skipper. Jack McMahon is the coach at San Diego, the same position he held in 1966-67 at Cincinnati.

San Francisco will be without Rick Barry, last season's NBA scoring titleholder. Barry left the Warriors and signed with the ABA's Oakland entry. However, a California judge ruled that Barry cannot play for any team except San Francisco until his option clause with the Warriors expires on Sept. 30, 1968. The star forward later elected to sit out the season.

In addition to Bianchi, two others will be making their pro coaching debuts in the NBA this season. They are Ed Jucker at Cincinnati and Bill Van Breda Kolff at Los Angeles. Both directed college teams last year, Jucker at the University of Cincinnati and Van Breda Kolff at Princeton.

George Mikan, former NBA star at Minneapolis, is the ABA's commissioner. Other teams in the circuit represent Dallas, Denver, Houston, Indiana, Kentucky, Minnesota, New Orleans, New Jersey and Pittsburgh.

Four one-time NBA standouts will be coaching in the new league. They are Cliff Hagan at Dallas, Slater Martin at Houston, Jim Pollard at Minnesota and Max Zaslofsky at New Jersey.

In tomorrow's games, Chicago is at Boston and St. Louis at San Diego in the National Association while Kentucky is at Indiana in the American. Two games are on tap Sunday, St. Louis at San Francisco in the NBA and Anaheim at Denver in the ABA.

Detroit's Eddy Has Knee Surgery, Out for Season

DETROIT (AP) — Nick Eddy, the hard-luck All-American halfback from Notre Dame who reported signed for a $300,000 bonus with the Detroit Lions this year, probably won't play any more football this season.

The rookie halfback underwent surgery on his right knee yesterday at the University of Michigan Medical Center. Eddy, who originally hurt the knee in a preseason exhibition game, re-injured it Tuesday when he slipped on the damp turf at Tiger Stadium.

"We could probably use him in the last few games of the season," said Joe Schmidt, coach of the National Football League club. "But he could easily get hurt again. I think it would be better for Eddy to rest the leg until next season."

Schmidt said the surgery was successful and Eddy would regain full use of his knee.

"It was one of those cartilage operations," said Schmidt. "It's a tough break. The kid worked hard to get back in shape."

Ironically, Eddy re-injured his knee on a day when Schmidt had canceled regular workouts because rain had made the field unstable and the ground crew was resodding the baseball diamond.

Eddy had had the case removed from his knee only two weeks ago and had been going through light workouts.

OEO Employees Protest Their Exclusion From Pay Hike Bill

BY JOSEPH A. LOFTUS
(c) N.Y. Times News Service
WASHINGTON — Hundreds of employees of the Office of Economic Opportunity spent their lunch period yesterday at a sidewalk meeting called to protest their exclusion from a pay raise bill for government employees.

The House action Wednesday night was at least the second signal from that chamber that the OEO's future is in jeopardy.

House Gives Ojukwu Mandate

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Biafra's House of Chiefs and Consultative Assembly yesterday gave secessionist leader C. Odumegwu Ojukwu a mandate to continue the war and recommended promoting him to full general, Biafra radio said.

Ojukwu, 33, a lieutenant colonel in the Nigerian army when he pulled the Eastern region out of the Nigerian federation May 30, told the leaders "Biafra's own men, using our own weapons," had shelled Enugu, the fallen capital, and were shelling Onitsha on the Niger River border with the Midwest state, according to the radio.

The broadcast said Ojukwu addressed the chiefs and assembly at Umuahia, 65 miles south of Enugu. This was the first indication of Ojukwu's whereabouts since last Wednesday.

Gurney's entire argument was directed at the number of employees in the higher paygrades, but his amendment was a blanket exclusion of all grades. It was adopted, 86 to 68.

Dominick Garofalo, president of the OEO local of the American Federation of Government Employees, who called the noon-day meeting, said that backers of the Gurney amendment were aiming at the higher pay brackets. He added:

"There are plenty of GS-2's standing on this sidewalk. There are plenty of GS-3's. A lot of people may not know how much a GS-3 makes. Well, it's $3,925 a year—right above the poverty line."

Hyman Bookbinder, an assistant to Sargent Shriver, the OEO director, urged the employees to maintain their "sense of humor and sense of proportion" about the House action.

Balancing himself on the hood of a car, Bookbinder said the House members "haven't had such a good laugh since the rat bill." He noted that the House action had been accompanied by some snickering, as happened when the House laughed down a rat control bill this year.

Truck Hits House; 6 Hurt

INDIANA, Pa. (AP)—Six persons were injured yesterday when a tractor-trailer plowed into their home and destroyed it.

A state trooper said it was a miracle no one was killed.

Police said the truck whipped out of control on a steep hill on U.S. 422 east of Indiana and veered into the house, coming to rest under a bedroom.

Amos Melott, 45, and his wife were sleeping in the room. The Melotts and their children, David, 16, and Darlene, 12, were hospitalized.

Also hospitalized were the truck driver, Donald W. Bowers, 36, of Altoona, and a rider, Robert L. Campbell, 28, of Ashville.

Combined damage to the home and truck were set at $50,000.

Scuffle at Toy Plant in Erie

ERIE, Pa. (AP)—A scuffle broke out yesterday when supervisory personnel tried to get past a crowd of pickets at the strike-bound Marx Toy Co. plant.

The nonunion workers were on their way to load boxcars inside the plant, where $2.5 million worth of toys is bottled up by the 134-day walkout.

About 90 policemen arrived to restore order and get the workers through. Two pickets required oxygen for shortness of breath and another was treated at a hospital and released.

Police said the crowd, estimated at 350, threw nothing and struck no blows. There were no arrests.

Mayor Louis Tullion said the firm and the International Association of Machinists have agreed to meet Tuesday.

WITH MORE WORDS THAN MEMBERS

Bradford Group Starts 'Draft Barr for President' Movement

BRADFORD, Pa. (AP) — A group with more words in its title than members announced plans yesterday to draft Mayor Joseph M. Barr of Pittsburgh for the state's presidential primary next year.

The letterhead on a news release sent to organizations all over Pennsylvania said the group is the Draft Barr for President Committee. But only four people were named as officers, and two of them said they didn't know anything about it.

The address of the "committee" was listed as a post office box in Bradford, one of the most heavily Republican cities in Western Pennsylvania.

"I don't know a thing about it and I don't want to know," said Herbert Pettenati, McKean County Democratic chairman who was listed as a member of the advisory board.

"I never heard of it," said Tim Ellis, who dropped out of the University of Pittsburgh in August with a couple of credits to go before graduating. He was listed as secretary-treasurer.

When told the name of the president, Peter J. Pascuzzi, and how the "committee" wants to make sure there is a pro-Johnson name on the ballot, Tim said:

"Oh yes, now I remember Pete saying something about it ... Say, am I secretary-treasurer?"

The third man, besides Pascuzzi, listed was John A. Still, an undertaker. He could not be reached by telephone. His office said it wasn't aware of the committee.

Pascuzzi, reached at his parents home where he lives, said he mailed the releases. He said he had talked about the plan with lots of people.

"The feeling seems to be that I should go ahead and start the ball rolling and see what the reaction is," he said. He acknowledged the committee was small. He said he was pleased that a news story based on his letter had been printed on the front page of a large newspaper.

The theory behind such a movement, Pascuzzi said, is to make sure that any potential antiwar candidate has opposition. "Otherwise he might win and it would look like Pennsylvania is not behind the president," he said.

Pascuzzi, who said he publishes a weekly newspaper of political news, said he had not contacted Barr before sending the letter.

Pascuzzi said he was also president of the Bradford Area Democratic Club. He said it was rather small. Ellis and Pettenati agreed. They said a gathering of half a dozen was a big meeting for the club.

Barr could not be reached by The Associated Press for comment. However, he told a newspaper:

"Naturally I am honored even to be mentioned in this context. However, such a move, in my judgment, is totally unnecessary because the results of the presidential primary in Pennsylvania do not obligate the delegates to the national convention in any way."

2 Trains Jump Track at Erie

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — Two trains derailed yesterday, tearing up several yards of track and blocking the New York Central's main line for 6½ hours.

The railroad said a pipe jutting out from a load on a freight train snagged on a freight traveling the opposite direction, scattering 15 cars across the four tracks just east of nearby Fairview.

A brakeman received head and shoulder injuries and was hospitalized for observation.

State Fishing Tournament In Tidoute This Weekend

Normally a rather quiet little town on the Allegheny River, Tidoute will be a beehive of activity tomorrow as the two-day 1967 Pennsylvania State Fishing Championship Tournament gets underway. Fishermen from all parts of the state will be competing for the championship title, the 1967 crown and trophy, and an all-expense-paid trip to compete next year in the 1968 World Series of Sport Fishing.

Saturday's elimination round will find thousands of fishermen on the Allegheny between the Kinzua Dam and the Hunter bridge below Tionesta. Anyone with a Pennsylvania fishing license may participate between 5 a.m. and 10 p.m.

Judging will be on the basis of weight in four categories, bass, great northern, walleye, and muskellunge. Fish must be presented for weighing and registration no later than 10 p.m. Saturday at tournament headquarters in the Tidoute Water Office on Main st.

First and second place winners in each class will be determined and announced following the 10 p.m. deadline. These winners will be eligible to fish in the finals on Sunday. A door prize for all registered fish will be drawn Saturday night and referees selected for the next day's fishing.

The final event to determine the grand championship starts at 7 a.m. Sunday and continues until 2 p.m. Participation is limited to the eight Saturday winners, four winners of the summer contest, twelve Pennsylvania Fish Commission citation winners, and the last year's champion who will be absent this year because he is representing the state in the World Series of Fishing.

Judging Sunday will be on point basis, with 20 points for muskie; northern pike, 15 points; walleye, four points; and bass two points. Judges for both days will be Roger Latham, Pittsburgh Press outdoors writer; C. Paul Blair, Sharon radio announcer; Seth Myers, New Castle; Harley Wilson, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Kinzua Dam. Fishing in the finals on Sunday is limited to the stretch of Allegheny river between the Irvine and West Hickory bridges.

The Awards Program and Crowning of the 1967 Pennsylvania State Fishing Champion will take place at 3 p.m. Sunday at a gaily decorated platform erected on Main street between Depot and Green sts. The public is invited to attend the outdoor ceremony which will be emceed by William Allen. Pennsylvania Fish Commission personnel will be observers at the two-day championship tournament and participate in the crowning ceremonies.

Other Activities Offered Besides Fishing Tournament

Fishing is the big attraction of the weekend event but there will be many other activities to lure visitors to Tidoute. The town is bedecked for the occasion, with red, white and blue bunting, and multi-color banners and pennants.

The streets will be lined with sidewalk concessions, food booths, hunting, fishing, camping and outdoors equipment displays and live fish displays. Throughout the day until 10 p.m. fishermen will be coming in off the river to register their catches at tournament headquarters.

Saturday's second biggest event will be the hometown parade at 2 p.m. This is co-sponsored by the Tidoute Area Chamber of Commerce and the Tidoute Lions Club.

The Shoreliners Drum and Bugle Corps of North East will be a parade headliner and following the parade will present new and exciting sounds in a performance at the Tidoute ball field.

Another parade attraction will be the Zern Zern Shrine Oriental Band from Erie which will present a program before the judges' stand while the winners are being determined.

Beauty will be on parade also as appearances will be made by Miss Warren County, Suzette Johnson, and Miss America Teenager of Western Pennsylvania, Candy Benninger.

Clubs, churches, organizations and business places will have floats in the parade. There'll be clowns, comic and antique vehicles and the usual parade atmosphere accented by musical units.

Announcer for the parade will be Henry Fuellhart. Judges will be Robert Dilks, executive director of the Kinzua Dam Vacation Bureau; William Forsythe, president of the Titusville Chamber of Commerce; and William Allen, Warren County Commissioners' Clerk.

But the parade is only part of Saturday's program of events. There will be helicopter rides from the Tidoute ball field, starting at 10 a.m. The Vets and their ladies will be serving a fish fry and the Lions Club will start serving their chicken barbeque at 3 p.m. Potato salad, rolls and beverage will round out the meal.

Mountain Grange will hold a smorgasbord in the grange hall from 5 to 7 p.m. with ham, Swedish meatballs and creamed chicken being the entrees.

In past years, a cold evening has often put the damper on the traditional street dance but if the weather warms up the call of "One More Couple" may be heard on Main street near the Vets building.

Tidoute extends a warm invitation to all its Warren county neighbors to join in the fun and festivities surrounding the annual state fishing tournament this weekend.

State Sees Employment Increase

Pennsylvania's employment experienced a gain of 1,500 jobs from July to August to reach a total of 4,707,400, Secretary of Labor and Industry William J. Hart announced today. The Secretary noted that this was the highest employment total for any August on record.

Seasonal factors dominated the employment picture with factory employment, particularly in the soft-goods industries, showing gains while all other major job categories reported small declines.

Compared with August 1966, total employment was up 9,200. Secretary Hart pointed out that the current level of employment was more than 400,000 above that of five years ago.

Average hours and earnings for production workers in all manufacturing industries moved upward from July to August. A gain of three-tenths of an hour in the length of the average workweek coupled with an increase of two cents in average hourly earnings sent average weekly earnings up $1.64 to $112.92. This represented the highest hourly and weekly earnings on record. An over-the-year increase of eleven cents in average hourly earnings more than offset a loss of eight-tenths of an hour in average weekly working time, producing a $2.22 increase in average weekly earnings.

County Has 110 Poultry Farms; No. 33 in State

(TMO Harrisburg Bureau)

HARRISBURG—Warren County has an estimated 110 poultry farms within its borders, according to the State Department of Agriculture (which ranked the county 33rd of the 67 counties!).

At the top of the list of Pennsylvania poultry farms was Lancaster County with 1970 farms. Going to the other extreme, Philadelphia County ranked last with a whopping five poultry farms within the county limits.

However, on the average value of production per farm Warren County stands 51st of the 67 counties with an average of $3845 per farm. Counties range from Schuylkill County's high of $18,492 per farm to Greene County's low $995 per farm. The all-county average rounds out to $8086 per farm.

In January there were 53,300 chickens and turkeys on Warren County farms. The total did not include commercial broilers, according to the department. A county breakdown reveals there were 19,600 hens, 33,000 pullets and 700 other chickens and turkeys.

The value of the 53,300 chickens and turkeys was estimated at $79,100.

Last year Warren County farms had 46,000 layers in laying flocks producing an average of 230 eggs per layer (as compared with the statewide average of 219 eggs per layer) for an egg production of 10,580,000 eggs. Production was valued at $396,000.

Poultry meat production last year stood at 181,000 pounds which included farm chickens raised, commercial broilers and turkeys raised. Production was valued at $27,000.

Game Commission To Tour Dam

Staff members of the Pennsylvania Game Commission and the seven district supervisors will tour the Kinzua Dam on Wednesday, October 18, following their semi-annual meeting being held at the Franklin office.

The tour, arranged by Dave Titus, local game protector, will be conducted by Jack Ewers, manager of the Kinzua Dam.

In addition to a tour of the dam structure, the group will visit Jake's Rocks, Rimrock and other points of interest.

Medical Group Points Out Importance of 'Measles Sunday'

The Warren County Medical Association's all-out comprehensive program to immunize the children of Warren County against measles, includes a county-wide "End Measles Sunday" on October 15. Immunization clinics will be held in five school centers, from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

There will be no follow up clinics, according to Frank Christy, who as Warren County National Foundation, is coordinating the program. After the Sunday clinic, vaccine will have to be obtained through a physician or State Health Department clinics.

"There is no reason for any child's contracting measles any longer," declares Dr. Edward Verville, chairman of the "End Measles Sunday" program. "We have an effective and safe vaccine now to protect all our youth. In the past four years, 451 children in Pennsylvania died from Measles. This is a needless tragedy."

The Warren County Medical Association is providing the program, in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Health.

Conducting the measles clinic at Sheffield High School will be Dr. Joseph Mull; at Sugar Grove elementary school, Dr. George Riley; at Market Street School, Dr. Verville; at Pittsfield elementary school, Dr. John Thompson; and at Tidoute High School, Dr. A. J. Turbess.

Measles vaccine is expensive. Contributions to help defray the clinic costs are welcome, the chairman says. However, no one will be refused immunization because of inability to contribute.

Answering the question "Why should children take measles vaccine, Dr. Verville cites the experience in Allegheny County, Pa., in 1966, when 3,000 cases of measles were reported, with four cases of measles encephalitis, or brain inflammation, the most serious complication of regular measles, is estimated to occur about once in 1,000 cases. It ends fatally for a fourth of its victims, leaves another third permanently paralyzed or mentally impaired. In addition measles complications include ear infection, pneumonia and other respiratory ills.

Measles vaccine is administered by an injection in the upper arm. It takes only a moment to receive the shot. A single dose will probably confer lifetime immunity.

Parents are urged to complete registration forms, preferably before coming to the clinic. They can be obtained at the clinic. All children must be accompanied by a parent, guardian or other responsible adult over 21 years of age.

"THE NEW MATH" is one subject that should interest all parents of school children — and that is the subject to be explored at the next meeting of the McClintock Parent Teachers Association on Monday evening, October 16th at 8 o'clock. An authority will be there to tell the "how's and why's" of this new approach to mathematics — which is apt to seem much more complicated than the old approach to parents who feel, way down deep, that the old way was much more simple and direct, though, goodness knows, we could be wrong! — Well, the one who will enlighten parents on the matter is Mr. Norman H. Sampson, chairman of the New Math Department for the Warren County School District. All parents are asked to make a special effort to be present. Refreshments will be served by Mrs. Harold Traub, chairman of the committee of kindergarten mothers. Room visitation will be from 7:30 to 8 p. m.

"MUSICAL MERRY-GO-ROUND", a program on the development of musical comedy will be presented by Miss Janette Burns, assistant professor of Speech and Theatre Arts at the DuBois Campus of the Pennsylvania State University, at the Monday afternoon, October 16th, meeting of the Literature Department of the Woman's Club. Miss Burns has worked with the Altoona Community Theatre; Town and Gown Players; and the DuBois Area United Fund Musicals. She has a program on WFBG TV Altoona, and worked on the organization of Pittsburgh's channel 15. This past summer she worked with the Pennsylvania State Theatre Festival. Mrs. Clifford Johnson will be hostess for the Tea which follows the program.

THE BULLS AND THE BEARS, that time honored phrase describing the patrons of the stock market, is to be the theme of the first "Stockholders' Dance" to be held at the Conewago Valley Country Club. The affair takes place on Saturday, October 21st, when a social hour will follow the annual stockholders' meeting — A buffet dinner will be served at 8 o'clock, and dancing at 9 will be to the music of Gibbs Four Guys. Mrs. Rockwell O'Sheill, chairman, asks that members make reservations as early as possible and to plan on attending the meeting.

MINIATURES: Mrs. Olga Miller has invited the ladies of the Glade Firemen's Auxiliary to meet at the Wigwag for a tureen supper on Monday evening at 6:30. Bring a tureen and table service, and ask a neighbor to go with you. Jefferson PTA also meets on Monday, October 16th with classroom visitation at 7:30 followed by the 8 p. m. meeting. Special speaker will be Dr. T. K. Barratt, superintendent of Warren County schools. His topic will be "What We're Doing, and Where We're Going In Education."

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In June my husband, Roscoe, and I went to visit my father — and his second wife. (Mom died three years ago.) Dad's new wife has a 15-year-old daughter who looks 19 and has ideas that didn't dawn on me until I had been married three years.

Roscoe became very taken with "Lolita" and the next thing I knew he invited her to come back with us and finish high school here. "Lolita" nipped at the chance. She is living with us now and I see real trouble ahead.

Roscoe and I are both 45 and I've been coloring his hair for 10 years. I never had any girlie problems with him and I must say I am pretty shocked by all this. "Lolita" eggs Roscoe on by sitting on his lap and running around the house in her baby-doll nightgowns. She is lazy and has doubled my laundry and housework. Her grades in school are terrible. Any advice? — VIRGO

DEAR VIRGO: Revisit your father and his new wife at Christmas and give their daughter back to them. The reason: Too much work for you and falling grades for "Lolita." Leave Roscoe out of it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 15-year-old who feels like he is going to explode into a zillion pieces. I am not allowed to disagree with adults and I am not permitted to raise my voice. I would get creamed if I said a swear word. If I ever slugged anybody I would get grounded for life.

Every now and then I feel like kicking the cat or knocking a hole in the wall, but I realize this would be dumb. My dad says civilized people must learn to control themselves and I am sure he is right, but it doesn't seem normal for a kid not to be allowed to get the anger out of his system. Please give me some advice before I flip out. — PRESSURE COOKER

DEAR COOKER: People who are not permitted to get the anger out of their system do just as you said — they explode into a zillion pieces.

It is essential to get rid of the pressure which builds up in all of us, no matter how civilized we are. The trick is to use socially acceptable methods and not let off steam by doing things which are destructive and harmful.

Athletics is an excellent outlet for anger or frustration. Swimming, tennis, soccer, football, baseball, basketball, squash, or just plain running. A punching bag can be a useful target for hostilities. The answer is to let off steam on THINGS and not people.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have met a wonderful guy who works in another department of the company which employs me. We get along famously; and everyone has congratulated me on thawing him out because he is known to be cynical and hard to get next to.

The problem is that he has an inferiority complex about his height. He is much shorter than most men and even though I am several inches taller than he is it doesn't bother me at all. How can I let him know that he is a giant in my eyes without hurting his feelings? — SWEET ON SHORTY

DEAR SWEET: How you behave toward people speaks much more eloquently than anything you might say. Make no mention of his height. Just treat him well and he'll get the message.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Yom Kippur Begins At Sundown, Atonement Day

Yom Kippur, the Jewish Day of Atonement begins at sundown this evening and continues until sundown tomorrow. Jews throughout the world will observe this most sacred and solemn of the Jewish Holy Days. In Warren's Tiphereth Israel Synagogue the services will be conducted by Rabbi Jacob Landsman of New York City, this evening starting at 6:15 and all day tomorrow from 9 a. m. until sundown.

In Bradford worship for the Day of Atonement will commence this evening at 7 o'clock, with Mrs. Jack Wolf reciting the blessing over the Holy Day Lights. It will continue tomorrow at 9 a. m. Memorial (Yizkor) Services will be conducted at 11 a. m. The Neilah or concluding service will begin at 5 p. m. Dr. Kurt L. Metzger, rabbi, will be in charge of the services.

Yom Kippur is universally observed by all branches of Judaism by fasting from sundown to sundown, by prayer and by a searching reappraisal of the individual's behavior in his relationship to his fellow man and to his God. It is the culmination of ten days of intense self-examination during which the individual Jew examines the year just passed, atones for his shortcomings in relation to God and man, and expresses his hopes for strength and regeneration for the year to come.

The opening liturgy, sung during Yom Kippur eve, is called the 'Kol Nidray', a plea for forgiveness written in the 7th-8th century. The melody which accompanies it, one of outstanding and beautiful of all musical works in liturgy, has its origin in the music of medieval Spain and Germany. The 'Kol Nidray' (which means 'all vows') is a plea for God's forgiveness of human fallibility should man fail to keep the promises made to God.

The Services of Yom Kippur continue throughout the day, a section of which is dedicated to the memory of the departed.

As the sun sets the holidays conclude with a final blast from the shofar, the ram's horn used for thousands of years in the observance of Rosh Hoshanah (the Jewish New Year) and Yom Kippur.

The significance of Yom Kippur for the Jewish People is profound. It reflects an emphasis upon the nature of man as a responsible being, capable of change and redemption through his own acts and never irrevocably lost. By asking forgiveness of God, and of those he has wronged, man can change his life and the world around him for the better.

SPELLING AID

To improve the spelling proficiency of her small son—who like most active boys, loves sports, games, and challenges of all kinds... a Family Circle reader capitalized on these interests. On a large sheet of cardboard she drew two separate tracks about 20 inches long and marked off each track into 10 two-inch sections—the starting sections at one end of the cardboard, the winning sections at the other. Attached to the starting sections she placed a small toy car. After giving her son time to study a group of words, this mother called them out one by one, and the boy spelled each word aloud. Every time he spelled correctly, he moved his car forward one section; whenever he spelled incorrectly, his mother moved her car forward. Needless to say the boy's spelling has improved tremendously as a result of his work in trying to reach the winning section first.

West opened the queen of hearts, the deuce was played from dummy. East signaled encouragingly with the ten and declarer followed suit with the six—allowing West to hold the trick. South won the heart continuation, drew trump in two rounds ending up in dummy and then ruffed out the remaining heart.

The three top clubs were cashed to complete stripping operations in the side suits and then a small diamond was led from dummy. Declarer played the nine from his hand and West was in with the jack. The return of a heart would give South a ruff and discard, so West cashed the ace of diamonds. Declarer's king was now established, and the defense was limited to two diamond tricks and one heart on the deal.

East overlooked an opportunity to come to his partner's assistance and thereby thwart South's development of an end position. When the queen of hearts is opened, if East overtakes with the king—South must play the ace, or else East will have an opportunity to make a diamond play for West.

After trumps are drawn, a second heart will presumably be led from dummy. East must now rise with the nine and when this card holds the trick, he shifts to the eight of diamonds. West covers South's nine with the jack and then exits with a third heart. South must play diamonds subsequently himself and when he does, West cashes the ace and queen to defeat the contract.

Your Horoscope

By Frances Drake

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.
FOR FRIDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1967
ARIES (March 21 to April 20)—A day for astute thinking, clear projection. There is nothing "special" that you do not have to pay for in energy, striving, diligence, or good behavior. Don't depend on dubious friends.
TAURUS (April 21 to May 21)—Competitive infighting, family discussions, possible changes in the office today. Be alert and ready for all eventualities, and when the occasion demands, make the necessary adjustments.
GEMINI (May 22 to June 21)—A concession may be essential to accomplish your objective so weigh it carefully before deciding whether it is a legitimate one. Enjoy life to the fullest and utilize your potential in worthy areas.
CANCER (June 22 to July 23)—There will be a need for unrelenting effort and intelligent handling of projects (which you so ably can) this high-tension day. Economic matters, research and budget vie for first attention.
LEO (July 24 to August 23)—Have you determined if you are on the right track? Employing the correct methods and procedures? Timing your moves to coincide with the opportunities presenting themselves? Keep alert!
VIRGO (August 24 to September 23)—Get maximum effort in early so you will have time to preview, adjust and complete. These are momentous times and the live-wire and go-getter will be up with the leaders. Assure yourself of a spot.
LIBRA (September 24 to October 23)—It is important what you say and do, when it is said and done and finally HOW. Here rests your case so do it up proud and expand it as your productivity and ambition grow.

Be ready to act.
SCORPIO (October 24 to November 22)—An outgoing set of influences. Don't be overzealous but do be steadily energetic. Trades, mining and constructing are all vital organizations helpful to better living and health.
SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21)—You may be required to check personal desires in the interest of harmony and cooperation. Adapt yourself quickly to new, necessary business or turn of events. Make essential, rational moves.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20)—Home, heart and health affairs rate early consideration once your routine duties are well underway. A thought-provoking period that challenges the imagination and tests the initiative.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19)—A down-to-earth attitude with good will toward all permeates the atmosphere. Swing along and add your particular bit. Undertake no impossibles nor more than you can handle well.
PIECES (February 20 to March 20)—A sort of teaser day. Agreeable when you work without strain or a pre-occupied mind. Are amenable to sensible suggestions. New advantages appear so prepare to absorb them into your balliwick.
YOU BORN TODAY: Generally possess enduring ambitions, are clever, persevering, can carry on to successful conclusions whatever you set your mind to and really start. Overcome obstacles by sheer grit and patience which will, if properly cultivated, stand by your side all through life. Control a tendency to sensitivity or when the pendulum swings the other way, to stubbornness. As you start thinking of the years ahead and plan for fresh achievement, remember that economy and sound judgment top the list of basic MUSTS. Follow your ruling planet and make your loved ones proud of you.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. T. R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

FEIGNED CONVULSION
"All the world is queer save thee and me, and even thou art a little queer," (Robert Owen — 1771-1858).

During my senior year in medical school several of us had externships at the Bridewell jail. One day an old derelict was having a first class convulsion on the floor of the admitting room. Like so many others, he was an alumnus of the house of correction having been a guest of the city many times because of drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

Upon seeing me, the man redoubled his efforts and feigned a convulsion the like of which I had never seen. He tossed his head from side to side, rolled his eyes, and ground his teeth. His arms and legs jerked and twisted, assuming the most bizarre positions. In the midst of this performance his face and shoulders started itching so he took time out to scratch. This maneuver was a dead giveaway because the victim of a convulsion is unconscious.

Meanwhile the prisoners and guards gathered and it was obvious I was expected to do something. Crossing my fingers I said to the guards, "Put him in a cold shower." On hearing this, our skid row friend stopped his shenanigans, stood up, and mumbled, "You win, Doc." All he wanted was a soft bed in the infirmary rather than a hard bunk in a cell.

Apropos of this story is one that the late Dr. Harry Lee Parker told about an Irish character named Soapy Mouth Burke. Soapy chewed a bar of soap until his mouth emitted a froth. Then he would feign a convulsion on the street corner near the famous Davy Byrnes tavern in Dublin.

When a sympathetic crowd gathered, Burke came out of his seizure long enough to gasp, "Surgeon McCarthy told me many a time that if I had one of those fits in the street, I was to be brought directly to Mr. Byrnes' public house and made to take three glasses of raw brandy."

TOMORROW: Pancreatitis.
Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.

The Ida Siggins Class of Methodist Church held its monthly meeting Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Hugh McGraw. Eleven members and one guest made cancer dressings and viewed slides of Sweden.

Plans were made for the annual Thanksgiving dinner which will be held Nov. 13 at the home of Mrs. Earl Yeager with Mrs. B. W. Courson as hostess.

Triumph Community Aid held a tureen dinner meeting Wednesday night at the Grandin house. Mrs. Robert Anderson Sr. and Mrs. Marie Carson were hostesses.

Members attending from West Hickory, Pleasantville and the Tidoute area participated in the devotional program and business session. Plans were made for the group's Christmas philanthropic work.

Harold Konkle
Water Dept. Head

Tidoute borough council, meeting Monday night, unanimously selected councilman Harold Konkle to serve as the new head of the borough's water department. Konkle succeeds William Allen who asked to be replaced because of pressing personal duties.

Council voted to delay work on the four-inch auxiliary water collection and supply line until spring. The decision was reached when it was learned that hiring the work done by a contractor would be too costly and that the necessary equipment could be purchased as cheaply.

The equipment will be ordered for spring delivery. After acquiring the line-cleaning machinery, the borough probably will be able to recover the purchase price through rentals to other boroughs.

Triumph township supervisor Russell Hunter recommended that his township and the borough paint the structure and resurface the road bed of the Tidoute creek bridge on Grant street. Maintenance of the bridge is shared jointly by the borough and the township and the borough maintenance crew will do the work, with Triumph township being billed for its share of the costs.

Councilman Konkle introduced a discussion on the borough sidewalk ordinance because of an inquiry from a property owner who wanted to know what he was permitted to do or prohibited from doing in constructing a driveway. Mayor Lodge said a policy should be established and the problem was referred to the streets and sidewalks committee.

The water committee reported that final notices were being mailed this week to delinquent customers whose service will be curtailed if bills are not paid by Oct. 20. Borough secretary Karns reported receiving the county highway aid check for $1293.92 and said that the $2,000 note for the balance of the street paving project would be paid this month.

Supervisors Russell Hunter of Triumph Township, Peter Druggan and Nicholas Vushnick of Deerfield Township were present to discuss the future of the Tidoute Area Regional Planning Commission. There was no representation from Limestone Township, which also is a member of the local planning group.

It was agreed that an effort should be made to continue planning and zoning on the local level rather than to join the

NEWSPAPERS GET THINGS DONE

NATIONAL NEWSPAPER WEEK

OCTOBER 8 - 14

When you stop to think about it Banks and Newspapers have a lot in common. Both are service organizations staffed by dedicated men and women who spend most of their time counseling and helping people. A bank often provides the financial assistance necessary to start the wheels of commerce turning. A newspaper, through its advertising columns, provides the impetus to keep those wheels turning. Bank people lend their time and talents to many varied civic duties and organizations. Newspaper people report on those organizations and keep all of us informed of social and civic progress. Our bank prides itself on being a Full-Service Bank. Now during National Newspaper Week the stockholders, directors, officers and employees of our bank want to salute another full service group -- the men and women of our area newspapers.

Joseph O. Chambers, Greensburg, was elected president of the Pennsylvania Division, American Cancer Society, during opening sessions of the Society's 1967 annual meeting this week in Lancaster.

In related elections, four other officers, ten directors at-large and five honorary directors were also installed.

The new president is vice president of engineering, West Penn Power Company, before his retirement. Other officers named were John H. Harris Jr., M.D., Carlisle, first vice president; Robert H. McCormick, State College, second vice president; Donald F. Jones, Upper Providence, treasurer; and Mrs. R. R. Whitmer, Clarion, secretary.

Perry E. Gresham, Ph.D., president of Bethany College, Bethany, West Virginia was the keynote speaker for the session. Later in the day, David W. Clare, M.D., Pittsburgh, outgoing Division president reported to the more than 300 representatives attending the meeting on the Society's past year.

JCC Gets Okay On Construction

Jamestown Community College has received authorization from the State University of New York to proceed with plans for construction of an addition to the College Center.

Dr. Albert W. Balsler, JCC President, announced that the two-story, 48,000 sq. ft. structure will be used primarily for gymnasium expansion and storage.

At a later date, the storage area will be converted to a gymnasium teaching facility, Dr. Balsler said.

Bids for the new facility will be let after completion of architectural specifications.

Expansion plans for JCC and other State University community colleges were considered last week during an Albany conference attended by Dr. Balsler.

Report Says Serve Beer on Campuses

NEW YORK (AP) — Serving beer in college cafeterias and persuading hosts to refrain from continually filling guests' glasses would improve Americans' attitudes toward alcohol, a government report said yesterday.

The report entitled "Alcohol Problems—A Report to the Nation," will be published today. It recommended that Americans drinking be made a more gregarious social adventure. "The personal anonymity, darkness and generally furtive quality of many bars permits and even encourages behavior usually not considered socially acceptable," the report said. Serving beer on college campuses, the report said, "might reduce the current practice of groups of students piling into a car, driving several miles to a bar, drinking substantial amounts of alcohol in settings that lack the desired social control, and then driving back to the campus."

M.G. Keller, president of the board of directors of Warren County School District, has been asked to serve on the nominating committee for candidates for the office of President of the Conference of School Districts of the Second Class, a department of the Pennsylvania School Boards Association, by Franklin W. Zarfoss of York.
